Collier Sees Editorial As "Affront" To SGA

Survey Discloses A Third Of Group Had Not Read It

"An affront to the Student Government association" is the charge brought by James Collier, president of that organization, against the editorial which appeared in Friday's issue of the Kernel entitled "We Take Over The Hairbrush."

In an endeavor to determine whether or not members of the SGA concurred in this opinion, the Kernel made a survey of the 22 representatives with the following results:

Over one-third of the representatives did not read the article, and were, therefore, unable to express an opinion. Of the remaining 13 members, 11 interpreted the article as criticism of the SGA president only, or an idle wit to be an attack upon the entire association.

"Directed At Collier"

John Yeager, representative from the law college, stated that he understood that the editorial was directed at Collier. "However, it is my impression that it is a slam at the SGA," he added.

George Warwick, arts and sciences representative, who had read only part of the article, said, "I think that I would consider it an attack on the SGA."

Eloise Bennett, representative of the agriculture college, did not consider the editorial an attack on the SGA but she did feel that it would "go against the organization."

"A Little Sharp"

"The editorial was perhaps a little sharp in its criticisms," declared Jack Atchison, arts and sciences representative, but seemed directed entirely at Collier."

Freshman representative Jerry Eastman understood the editorial as an expression of the dissatisfaction of some of the editors about the SGA president's lack of appreciation of "Kernel support." He added that the SGA had not done anything this year so important that he considered an attack on the SGA president to be felt that the Kernel would have given proper cooperation if it had been justified.

"I'm For The Kernel"

"If you'd heard the things that have gone on, you'd know why the article was written," Vincent Stumolo, commerce representative, stated, "I'm for the Kernel."

Betty Lee Birk, freshman representative, had not read the editorial but had discussed it and was familiar with its contents. When asked if she considered it an affront to the SGA, she stated, "Not in the least. I am inclined to agree with the Kernel, and do not feel that in doing so I am being disloyal to student government. I heard the conversation between Collier and the Kernel reporter after the last meeting. I remarked then that the Kernel had done its part. Perhaps the SGA should appoint a public relations man to attend to publicity for the organization."

View-President Answers

Jane Birk, women's vice-president, was questioned although she is not included in the survey figures. She had read the article and thought it was very plainly directed at the president. "I do not think that all of Collier's remarks against the Kernel were justified," she stated.

Beethoven's Symphony Feted At Sunday Musicales

By JOSEPHINE HARRISON

Beethoven's "C Major Symphony," which is his American premiere in Lexington in 1817, was played at the Sunday afternoon concert in Memorial Hall, Prof. Carl Lampert, conducting the University Philharmonic orchestra before a large audience, gave the "C Major" a sympathetic interpretation. Professor Lampert's direction evoked an artistic response from the young men and women who composed the orchestra. His appreciation of Beethoven's music and his knowledge of the man and the music, which stand out as high points in Mr. Lampert's musical literature courses.

The audience was not sparing of applause.

War Maps

A map of the Russian theater of war appears in today's issue of the Kernel. Students and faculty are advised to clip this map. It will be invaluable in following the second front movement in Europe.

Campus Library Will Have Fire Of Congress Cards

The University library has been recently selected as the site where the Library of Congress will deposit its printed catalogue cards. The library has already received a large number of catalogue cards of which approximately 50,000 per year are issued. In order to work out a plan to make it possible for many libraries to have the use of the Library of Congress catalogue without large expense in filing equipment, the Association of Research Libraries appointed a committee to study the problem.

This committee has arranged with the cooperation of the library, to publish the Library of Congress catalogue in book form by means of the "photolith" process. The catalogue will contain approximately 1,800,000 cards and will consist of about 160 large volumes, 140 pages each.

Since it will be many months before the catalogue is completed, it will be necessary for some time to be kept in the University library to receive its first ten or twelve volumes as that is the number to be issued each time, according to Miss Margaret King, University librarian.

When the catalogue cards will be returned to the Library of Congress, all the cloth-bound books have been received, it has not been decided yet whether all the cards will be placed in files in the main lobby. The cards will be of normal size to the librarian and the graduate student that they will be to the undergraduate, Miss King explains.

The cards which the University library is receiving list only authors of material catalogued in the Library of Congress in the last two or three years while the large volumes will contain all the authors catalogued there.

Sgt. Alvin York Will Speak At Annual Farm And Home Convention January 26-29

Convention Held In Memorial Hall For Men, Women

Popular Students Elected

Theme of the thirty-first annual Farm and Home convention to be held here January 26-29 is the statement made by Dr. Thomas Poole, Cooper, dean of the agriculture college. This is the year of an extra good job of farming and homemaking to produce the necessities of foodstuffs that will be needed to win the war.

For the first time in the history of these conventions general meetings for both men and women will be held in Memorial hall in order that everyone may hear the speakers.

Sergeant Alvin York, hero of World War I, will speak at the general session at 11 a.m. January 28, in Memorial hall. His subject will be "The Strength That Is America."

The man who probably knows more about the food situation of the nation than any other person, Roy Hendrickson, director of the Food Distribution administration, Washington, D. C., will speak on "American Food," at 11 a.m. January 27, in Memorial hall.

Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, Ann Arbor, Mich., specialist in the field of nutrition and family relations, and author of a number of books on youth problems, will be a featured speaker. She will lecture on "Normal Living in Abnormal Times" at 11 a.m. January 27, in Memorial hall, and will discuss "Family Well-Being and the Permanent Peace" at 10:15 a.m. January 28, in Memorial hall.

Mrs. Overton was on the campus in 1939 in connection with the Religion in Life conference. This relationship has continued and she is also a college instructor in public speech and drama.

"Wartime Britain" will be discussed by Hilda Bell, York, England, wife of Lt. Col. Lowery of the Royal Air Force. This information is also a college instructor in public speech and drama.

SGA Prexy Takes The Floor

My first inclination after reading the column "We Take Over The Hairbrush" was to ignore it, since it impressed me as being merely a personal attack. But on studying it, I found it to be an affront to the Student Government Association, and therefore the matter should be made clear to the students.

The first time I remember Mary Norma Weatherspoon was just before the presidential campaign last spring when she was backing the candidacy of my opponent. After Miss Weatherspoon became Kernel reporter for the SGA, several people warned me that the lady did not like me personally and that I could expect journalistic sabotage.

I forgot all this until later, when it was most forcefully brought to my mind. The budget was up for discussion, and the legislature requested me to consult the Comptroller of the University in order to ascertain the financial status of the SGA.

The next day when I went to see the Comptroller to attend to this business for the legislature, I sensed that the same cordiality which I am generally received by Mr. Peterson was not there.

Mr. Peterson had been informed by Mr. Plummer, head of the Journalism Department, that Miss Weatherspoon had written a story on which the headlines would in effect have read "SGA Charges Comptroller of Fraud."

Mr. Peterson had been informed by Mr. Plummer, head of the Journalism Department, that Miss Weatherspoon had written a story on which the headlines would in effect have read "SGA Charges Comptroller of Fraud."

At times after legislature meetings when Miss Weatherspoon would ask for further information about things that had been discussed, I would suggest she not write up parts of the discussion until after they had been more fully developed in the legislature when she could get the complete story and not just part of it.

student governments and college newspapers, and I would criticize both the SGA and the Kernel. (My main criticism of the Kernel was censorship.) Perhaps this is what she means by "repeated slurs, slights, insinuations, accusations, and plain insults."

Some time after the fraud incident had died down, an SGA official came to me and said he had been misquoted in the Kernel by Miss Weatherspoon. I immediately called Miss Weatherspoon's attention to this. Her fury knew no bounds. Angriest she took the minutes and proved to me that she had quoted this official exactly. I apologized to her, and admitted that she was right.

About the same time I was asked by Miss Weatherspoon to give her material for an article, and I released two as an accommodation when really more time was needed to develop them fully.

Miss Weatherspoon, would you let your personal animosity for one person divide old friends - SGA and Kernel - and start them quarreling, to the detriment of both?

As you have criticized the SGA and its policies on occasions, so have I felt the right to criticize your paper and its policies when I disagree with them. I am very sorry, Miss Weatherspoon, that you have attempted to cause the SGA and the Kernel to indulge in a mud-slinging contest.

JAMES COLLIER

He's Not Important

A short while after he became Prime Minister, Winston Churchill visited some friends in the west side of London. He was scheduled to make an address that evening.

It was already dark when he left and he feared that he might be late for the broadcast. Rushing over to a cab that was parked at the curb, he told the driver to take him to the broadcasting station.

"Sorry, but I can't take you that far," said the cabbie, not recognizing the distinguished fare.

"Why not?" asked the Prime Minister.

"Mr. Churchill is broadcasting in a little while. I'm going home to tune in. I wouldn't miss his speech for the world."

Mr. Churchill was so flattered by this that he handed the man a pound note. At the sight of this, the driver's eyes almost popped out of his head.

"Hop right in!" he exclaimed, starting the motor. "Churchill ain't that important?"

"All I said was that I thought I'd die laughing at this funny paper."

Out Of This World

By Bill Goodloe

As anyone can plainly see, various and sundry hell weeks are now in progress. All the little KD's are running around just as quiet as little moose - hummmmm - and of course the tuxed KA's promenade all over the place.

Did you have a good time with a certain little KD peddle in Monticello this weekend? Or did you just go down with her to protect her from the nasty of men on the buses? Be that as it may, here's a word of advice-it's always a good policy to keep your gals as far apart as possible.

The Marines promptly came back with the statement that the reason that the regular army was so late in getting to the scene of action was that they couldn't move in until the Marines had built USOs for them - Daily Tar Heel.

While playing around the Kernel office yesterday afternoon getting into everybody's way and consequently being many fool questions I found out that "Out of This World" who steers its course, the student who give it life - all a part of my life. It will never be the same, nor will I. This present phase seems like an interlude, a stormy one to be sure, between a past life that has ended and a future one that I hope to build an interlude that is fully dramatized the two word dateline above (at sea).

War Panels Are Beneficial

Maybe we don't need to think; maybe we believe that our nation can win the war and the peace without our "turning a hand; maybe we feel that college students are incapable of shaping world affairs.

Formed in the dark hours following the "dawning of the day of infamy," the panel discussion group which meets regularly on Wednesdays is designed to present "food for thought."

The war forum was started as a project of the women's defense council of the University shortly after the beginning of the second semester of 1942.

At the outset the idea behind its organization was to give students a clearer insight to world affairs. Interested students, campus leaders who felt the need of discussion among students and professors, were the founders.

There are no named speakers in the panel. True, chosen professors lead the weekly discussions, but each student has an equal chance for participation.

In the first days of the group, in addition to the chairman, two professors and one student were selected to lead the meetings. Sometimes one professor and two campus representatives would be chosen and at other times a newspaperman or businessman from downtown would appear. Usually it was decided best not to include two students or professors from the same department but always advisable to have present either a member of the political science or history department.

However, this did not and does not mean that all present do not have opportunity of expressing their views. That prevailing thought would only serve to defeat the purpose of the panel.

This year the panel discussions are in the hands of the Student Union forum committee and the International Relations class. Their organization is much the same as the form of the originators.

When faculty members appear as group leaders their discussions do not always follow the work of the subjects they instruct in their respective departments. They have their own opinions about the war and what can happen after the crisis.

The very least any one University student can do is attend one of the panel discussions. Your views may be biased or otherwise. The group does not meet to settle an argument. But it is a safe bet that you will think and think hard at the forum. You have an opportunity to ask questions and lead your own discussions. Take advantage of it.

Czechoslovakia-An Occupied Nation

The story of the resurrection of the town of Lidice, in Illinois, was a disturbing bit of news to the Nazi propagandists. First, the town was in the silence of it. But the story got across the ocean and through the sealed frontiers of Greater Germany.

It became known to the Czech people through the Czechoslovak broadcast in London, Moscow, and Boston. On October 18, it was confirmed to the Czechs in Prague by no less a personality than the S. S. Gruppenfuhrer and the State Secretary of Bohemia, K. H. Frank.

In a public speech delivered on the occasion of the celebration held in connection with the remaining of the Vltava Quay in Prague to "Reinhard Heydrich Ufer" on October 18, he warned the Czechs that they have just one more chance to reform and to repent, but that it will be the last chance. He deplored the fact that a part of the Czech people succumb again to the hissing campaign of a clique of Czech immigrants in London and said that German messengers in the culprit "will not be stopped by a request Mass served for the Czech bishop Goran in the Cathedral of St. Paul in London, nor by the American aid and folly of re-christening Lidice."

The official confirmation of the fact that Lidice was resurrected in the United States as a symbol of the sympathy of the American people with the Czechoslovak cause created a deep impression on the masses of the Czech people and intensified their opposition against the hated oppressors.

Official Circles Worried Hungarian official circles are becoming worried over the growing influence exercised by the London Czechoslovak districts, now occupied by Hungary. With the slogan "Do not believe the London Czechoslovak emigrants," a campaign was started by the newspapers which revealed that propaganda carried on by the distribution of leaflets and by other means in the district of Kosice, the largest city of Slovak territory now occupied by the Hungarians, has influenced the population against the Hungarian authorities.

In Carpathian-Russia, hatred of the Magyars has assumed dangerous proportions. Near the city of Berehovo, the peasants are openly supporting the guerrillas fighting against the Hungarian police. In one of the ancient fortresses, several hundred peasants, accused of guerrilla activities, have been imprisoned and tortured. The authorities ordered the evacuation of Jews from the villages to the towns because the peasants are ignoring the anti-Jewish regulations.

Drifted Carpathians It is reported from Moscow that the Carpathian Russians drafted in the occupied Czechoslovak territory into the Hungarian Army and sent to the Eastern Front, regarding the Hungarian officers. They are being fed in a separate mess in which it became known to the Czech people through the Czechoslovak broadcast in London, Moscow, and Boston.

The prisoners of war report that the Carpathian Russians are being closely watched by the Hungarians and that every precaution is being taken to prevent them from deserting and joining the Russians.

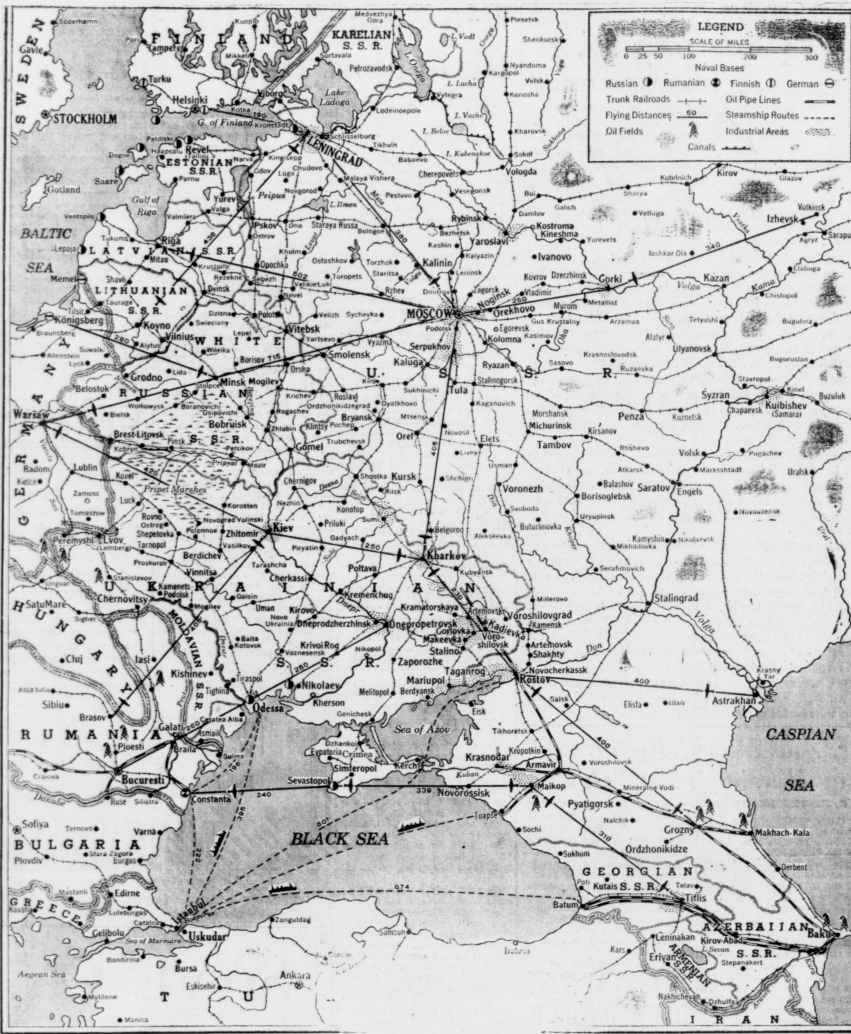

When speaking about our Allies in Germany some newspapermen and radio commentators have in mind the German underground movement. They are mistaken. While it is true that the older generation of Germans especially the workers, were lukewarm toward the Nazis and that some were underground, the fact that the underground movement of the Germans is being actively watched by the Hungarians and that every precaution is being taken to prevent them from deserting and joining the Russians.

More Than They Believed The American people are doing more in this one year than they themselves believed and think themselves to be the Jewish question. Masaryk said that Hitler's anti-Jewish madness grows proportionately with the immensity of his defeat, that the Czechs and the Slovaks must do everything in their power to make life easier for their fellow Jewish citizens, and that it is insolence to boast of how well the Jewish question has been solved.

There are journalists, too, who publish lying articles saying how contentedly Slovak Jews are living in Polish ghettos. This disgusting cynicism cries to Heaven. "I solemnly warn every Slovak who supports this bestiality and helps to send our fellow Jewish citizens to certain death. There is also a number of persons falsely professing to be Slovaks, who have enriched themselves at the expense of these innocent martyrs and who are growing fat on stolen property. The Allies will win, and all criminals will be punished according to the laws of war. Robbery in battle is punishable by death. It seems that millions of Jews are to be slaughtered."

Today, this small, minute, freezing, ill-treated minority is given over to the mercies of German anti-Christians. In these times, even a sign of anti-Semitism is proof of shameful and disgusting cowardice. If what Hitler has said is true, that the great German nation is still afraid of the remaining Jews, then this is indeed a terrible testimony to the Deutsche Volkshalle. And if this criminal action is initiated by people who feign to be Slovaks or Christian Slovaks, then this signifies a judgment, which those concerned pronounce upon themselves.

This business of getting out two columns in as many days, what you do, and the added discomfort of classes (pros please take note) is enough to wear a gal down, but after all, fashion is fashion, so if you can stand the strain so can I.

Headlining our preview of today's modes is a houndstooth of a suit that fits the occasion on the basketball court, dinner, or any time or place you need it. Made of a new fabric mixture of corduroy and cotton called "wide-wale," this suit is smart, smooth and a necessity to your wardrobe. It comes in a variety of pastel shades, red, powder, sand, apple-green, and gold, and is tailored to fit with as much drape and length in the jacket as you will find in any suit of today. And the item that meets with our approval is that the little number is inexpensive.

Are you planning to visit one of your boys in one of the southern army or navy camps? If you are, and knowing full well that some of you will add to your wardrobe with a few of the newest dresses in the all-encompassing seersucker. The drawing dress brings out the smartest in these suckers and makes for comfort plus a great deal of style. Also the chambray materials show up well in these drawing numbers.

It seems as though we can't keep cottons out of the picture, not just for variety, and to make the scene colorful, why don't you try a chintz evening dress? Featuring all the best points of a formal nowadays, and that means as much material as possible, these dresses are something that impressed your writer was striped in the skirt and featured a quilted white bodice. The chintz harmonizes so well with quilting, we think that it is one of your best bets for the spring and summer. Purim is as scenic as her's teeth in now, so snap up any and every one you see.

'Cats Take SEC Lead By Topping Vol, 30-28

To the top of the Southeastern Conference standings goes Kentucky's Wildcats, following their 30-28 victory over Tennessee's Vols Saturday night in Knoxville. High light of the contest between the two old arch-rivals was the second-half spree by the Kentuckians that enabled them to overcome a 16-8 intermission lead.

Coach Adolph Rupp's boys outscored their hosts, 22-12, in the last 20 minutes of play to win the title. Ace Parker, that the Bluegrass basketballers were able to top the Tennessee. Parker not only contributed nine points toward the winning offensive, but also played a stellar floor game. High scoring honors however, went to Mill Tico, veteran 'Cat forward, who tallied 12 markers. Paul Herman, Vol captain, led his mates with 11.

The game, in general, was a typical Kentucky-Tennessee brawl. Rough, colorful, and full of thrills aplenty for the 3,000 spectators, the fracas followed the pattern set by previous Wildcat-Vol clashes. Baron Rupp, target of a Tennessee heckling gallery, kept the partisan fans in a dither all night. At the end of the game both he and the University of Kentucky coach, Johnny Mauer, were protesting when the Mauser went into a 2-0 lead as the game opened on Ted Cook's long shot, but Tico nullified led this almost immediately with a short effort. Kenny Rollins converted a charity leave to put the 'Cats in front, but Dick Methylene Vol pivot-man, sent his pals in front to stay with a two-pointer. Only two Kentucky fielders were sunk during the first half—by Tico and Ed Lander, sub center. Free throws by Rollins and Lander and by Mel Brewer accounted for the other 'Cat scoring. The Big Blue offense was continually broken up by the Vol front defense before reaching the inner zone.

As the second-half got under way, however, the visitors began to shoot more often and connected with a good percentage of their shots. Tennessee upped its advantage to 21-14 five minutes after the start, but here the Kentuckians began to take command. Shot by Parker and Tico trimmed the score to 26-20 a few minutes with two minutes to go, and then the free throws started.

Parker and Tico each added another goal, before Herman counted two free shots for Tennessee, but Parker scored on a shot from the foul zone, and Tico kept led, 29-28. A charity effort by Parker ended the game's point-making. Kentucky had the best of it at the free throw line, converting eight and missing only seven, while the Vols made 10, but were unsuccessful a like number of times. Nineteen personals were called on the winners, 14 on Tennessee. Muff

Gard, 'Cat forward, and Rollins, guard, led the tilt with four fouls each. Cook was lost to the Vols for the same reason. The Wildcats were to play Georgia in Athens last night and Georgia Tech in Atlanta tonight before returning home. Saturday night the Baron's proteges go against the Irish of Notre Dame in the Jefferson County Army in Louisville.

Women—How They've Glamorized Bowling!

BY ART BRONSON

IT'S simply wonderful what women can do to make men behave. Little more than 15 years ago a poolroom was a place where young fellows loitered and learned better ways of being bad. Now there aren't any poolrooms because they've all been turned into bowling alleys and the women have crowded in to the point where a man has just about got to be shaved and wear a tie to get inside.

Knapp Sees Banner Year For UK Fencing

With most of last year's fencing team returning for another season's play, fencing coach Dr. Charles M. Knapp is looking forward to a banner year in the sport. In 1942 the UK parriers didn't do so well in the ancient game, but this can be explained partly by the turnover in coaching personnel. What with mentors leaving for the army, and this 'n-that, the Wildcat thrusters were nearly all ways working out under a new skipper. This season, however, things are different and 1945 should bring a good harvest.

Chances are that the squad will play a limited schedule, since transportation difficulties threaten to get down on the number of meets. So far no definite schedule has been released, but tentative dates have been set with several schools.

Included among the probable foes are Kentucky's oldest rivals, such as Georgia Tech and the University of Cincinnati. It is hoped that home-and-home matches can be arranged with these institutions, and negotiations are under way for meets with other schools. A schedule will be announced as soon as it is approved by Bernie Shively, athletic director.

Holdovers from last season's varsity total six, and three newcomers are giving the veterans a battle for starting positions. Fribert Thompson, John Swift and John Hubbard, foil lettermen, are back, as is William Carroll, who teamed with Hubbard at saber last year. Seymour Pudding, epee artist in 1942, is also available for duty this year.

KERNEL SPORTS

The Sporting Way

By BAXTER MELTON

Collegiate fencing has come a long way in recent years, according to Dr. Charles M. Knapp, coach of the ancient art at the University. And Dr. Knapp's commentary should be worth listening to, since the scholarly gentleman was a varsity performer at Columbia University in his undergraduate days.

Twenty-five years ago, the professor will tell you, there was absolutely no interest in the sport west of the Appalachian mountains. Stronghold of the epee-and-saber game was the Inter-Collegiate Fencing League, formed by members of what is now known as the Ivy League.

That look, together with a couple of athletic clubs here and there, were about the only groups catering to the sport. Both the New York and San Francisco athletic clubs sponsored teams, but outside of these, fencing organizations were about as common as 'ot-simers on the St. Louis Cardinal baseball club today.

Thus, as Dr. Knapp points out, most of the fencing enthusiasm was centered in the East. In contrast, today nearly every college in the West and South has a squad of fencers.

Vanderbilt, Georgia Tech and Georgia are among Kentucky's best-known foes in the Southeastern Conference which has thriving teams. Almost all the schools in the Southern Conference sponsor such squads, including Clemson, Duke, William and Mary, George Washington, et al.

Nowadays, Ohio is the hotbed of fencing, where practically every institution is represented by a band of parriers. Case and Ohio State are two of the stronger schools. Likewise, the University of Cincinnati, which has had the sport since way back when, Illinois, a bordering state, lays claim to a fencing squad from the state university.

Another major difference between teams a quarter-century ago and now is their coaching. Previously, UK's mentor says, all of the fencing instructors were professionals, now, however, many amateurs, so to speak, are in the drivers' seats.

Here, at the University, the historian-coach is prepping his second outfit of fencers for what looks as a brief season, because of war-time restrictions on travelling. No definite meets have been scheduled as yet, but tentative dates have been agreed upon with several other conference schools.

He won't go all-out in talking of his charges' chances this year; he's not overly optimistic, but he is pretty happy about the whole thing, since he has most of last year's team back.

Mr. and Miss U. K. Agree War Marriages Are "Out"

By BETTY ROHANNON

To marry or not to marry is the question, and for once Mr. and Miss U. K. agree on something. Almost all of the fifty students interviewed here, in their candid "thumbs down" on so-called "war marriages," when the couple has only a short acquaintance and courtship is still in its infancy.

However, while the girls were definitely for marriages based on a courtship of at least a year, only two-thirds of the boys favored marriage under these circumstances.

The men argued that marriage is fast losing its meaning and is not taken seriously enough. Often the parties concerned are not really in love but only intimidated, and many of the unions cannot last.

Whether or not the wife should work was another question favored by two-thirds of the girls and only one-third of the boys. The girls said they would have to work if they were not married, so why not if they were?

War widows should have a fifty-fifty chance of getting another husband among U. K. men, but few of the boys wanted to take over a ready-made family.

Two-thirds of the men and women expressed the belief that it is all right for girls engaged to marry to date other people. But, they cautioned, this should not be carried to extremes and should be kept on a strictly friendly basis.

Some of the students said "Dating is permissible for a couple with only an understanding, but not if the engagement has been formally announced." In either case, U.S.O. affairs were voted "O. K."

General opinion of both boys and girls is that there will be more divorces after the war than there were before as a result of hasty marriages. One reason given was that the increased freedom of women is fast breaking their ties to

"He Rupp and Ready" Views Dixie Most Hated Cage Coach

Kentucky's Hero Is Direct Target For Heckler's Fire

(Editor's Note: This is a condensation of the article "He's Rupp and Ready" written by Jimmy Jones of the Louisville Courier-Journal and appearing in the current issue of "Equine").

When the most hated basketball coach in Dixie brings his pore 117 mountain boys into a town, the "hecking society" and all the village urchins leave their firesides on cold winter nights to go out and boo him.

Since coming out of the University of Kansas, 12 years ago, Adolph Frederick Rupp has won a large and enthusiastic following of enemies who call him "The Human Loud Speaker."

MAKING ENEMIES Making enemies is the Baron's method of getting people to talk basketball and of stimulating enthusiasm for his games. He assumes a grating and rasping disposition as he strides behind his mountain boys when they take the gym floor, and bows from left to right when his renowned "hecking society" goes into action. He gets a lot of bars, but if that's the strategy necessary to build up a team, he's always "Rupp and Ready."

To the basketball fans of the South, the man in the brown suit is a sort of active human volcano erupting around spouting irritating verbs.

COURSE CHANGED IN ENGINEERING TO INCLUDE MEN

Starts February 1; No Fee Charged For The Training

The recently proposed course in engineering fundamentals for women who have completed four years of college has been changed to include both men and women, who have had one or more years of satisfactory college training.

The course will begin Monday, February 1. No tuition fee will be charged. Students will provide their own textbooks and supplies which will not exceed $15.

The course, which will run for ten weeks, carries no college credit. Certificates will be issued to those who successfully complete the work. There is no age limit or written entrance examination. Qualification is based on a sworn statement of experience, education and training.

The classes will meet 3 hours a week and will consist of engineering drawing, surveying, elementary mechanics and materials, engineering computation and problems and shop process and problems.

Persons successfully completing the course may qualify for position of technical assistant at a salary of $1440 to $1880 or as a junior engineer with salary beginning at $2000.

All appointments are for the duration and in no case more than six months afterward.

Among the government departments to which these civilian engineers would be eligible for appointment are the Bureau of Ordnance, Bureau of Ships or the Hydrographic office of the Navy department, the U. S. engineering office or Office of Chief of Ordnance of the War department, the U. S. Maritime Commission, the U. S. Geological Survey, National Advisory commission for Aeronautical Administration, U. S. Coast Guard and Geodetic Survey and other federal agencies.

Each time. Most famous of these was the "scoreboard decision" in 1941, when, at the game's end, the scoreboard showed a 47-0 deadlock, but the official score held that Notre Dame led, 48-47.
