EDITOR OUSTED

The editor of the Centre Colleege Cento was ousted this week at the instigation of President Turk. Although The Kernel does not agree with the views which the former editor expressed in his editorial on marriage, which was responsible for the change in editors, it cannot but find a certain reasonableness in the editor's assertion that the constitutional guarantee of free speech was violated when he lost his position.

College and university newspapers should be but minutes of the modern daily paper. Supervision which is not placed on the latter group should not be exercised over collegiate papers.

Had the administration overlooked the editorial in The Cento it is doubtful if it would have attracted much attention. By calling attention to it the administration brought about the precise condition which it sought to avoid. Readers of the editorial would have been prone to discredit the intellectuality of its writer had not the Centre president seen fit to oust the editor because of it.

SCABBARD AND BLADE

Scabbard and Blade, national honorary military fraternity voted this week to donate $50 to the Student Loan fund. This donation, although it may not be materially significant, is an expression of helpfulness and goodwill which is most meritorious.

Many campus organizations could afford to make similar contributions to the fund, and no wiser method of charity could be chosen than such a contribution.

Under present conditions there are many students who deserve the opportunity to procure it. The Student Loan fund is the ideal mechanism for this purpose, and the donation by Scabbard and Blade recognizes its usefulness on the campus.

WAR AND YOUTH

It always had been our impression that youth was impetuous, adventurous, careless. We believed that young men loved conflict and fighting, and that war almost always was traceable in some degree to this youthful enthusiasm.

At present China and Japan are engaged in a war which at times suggests that the United States might be involved. This belief is little credited, and that circumstance is most unlikely. This may be responsible for the lack of interest in the conflict which is being displayed by the younger generation.

Perhaps the memory of the last war holds in check the spirit which usually makes youth enthusiastic over the prospect of war, or perhaps the youth of today is saner and more mature than were their elders at the same age. At any rate, the current attitude toward conflict is one which is an excellent example of the public consciousness of the benefits of peace.

Since youth does not want to fight it is hardly likely that there will be a fight in which youth will be engaged. The situation is certainly a surprising one, and to what- ever it may be due, it cannot but be regarded as an intelligent reaction to a condition which has wreaked havoc upon mankind in the past.

RELIGIOUS WEEK

Religious emphasis week, a period delegated for student appreciation and study of religious problems, opened Wednesday and will continue until Thursday, February 18. The program, directed by the Young Men's and the Young Women's Christian associations, includes general discussions by university men and women under the guidance of competent leaders, features addresses by such a renowned speaker as Dr. S. Parker Cadman, and sponsors a Co-to-Church Sunday.

Although religious tendencies among students at a university do not every day take such an overt form of expression as displayed by a week set aside for this special purpose, nevertheless, they are existent, and it is particularly beneficial and fortunate that they annually take this outward form. Religious Emphasis week not only clarifies spiritual beliefs, it promulgates them and serves notice on the public that while college persons may not be the most religious in the world, they are religious.

Jest Among Us

If some of the students stay around the university much longer, they will be eligible for some kind of a pension.

"Students who fail to make a standing will be barred from campus activities." Oh well, the Jester needs a rest anyway!

Dame Rumor whispers that the Alphas are sponsoring some sort of impromptu Pan-Hellenic bridge contest.

This week's simile: As snobbish as a guy who got his name in "Sneers and Smirks."

And the Famous Last Line: "Aw, I made a point nine-standing!"

On the great clock of time, there is but one word, "Nertz."

'Green Pastures' Plays Cincinnati

By WEBSTER COSSE From almost any angle, "The Green Pastures," a dramatization of negro spirituals, which opened at the Grand in Cincinnati, is a play of lasting impressions. Its comedy, religion, fantasy, folklore, and sublime beauty carry it to great heights. The fable of the Lord walking on earth to those regions where after simplicity reigns in religious conception produces a play of great emotional feeling and spiritual exaltation.

It was suggested by Roark Bradford's volume, "Old Man Adam and His Chillum," tales told about the time when the Lord walked the earth like a natural man. Through eighteen scenes it follows the chronology of biblical history as the ignorant religious negroes of the South might interpret it in childish terms of their personal experiences.

The author, Marc Connelly, has transformed it from negro comedy to universal drama by increasing the emphasis upon the enduring theme. The theatre-goers will be delighted by the incongruities of the spectacle—the Lord in his private office telling Gabriel not to blow his horn, Noah blowing the steamboat whistle on the Ark, the negro angels and the fried fish parties. All through the play these splendid strokes of imaginative comedy make "The Green Pastures" an evening's entertainment.

The cast and chorus of this Pulitzer Prize play includes all but one of the performers acting on the opening night two years ago in New York. Richard B. Harrison does a marvelous characterization as the "Lard" and through his sympathetic burdens which are embroilment upon him.

SNEERS SNICKERS SCANDAL

By DEREK SMYTHEFIELD

We Receive a Letter
Follows one of the most entertaining communications I have ever seen our pleasure to receive:

Derek Smythefield, Kentucky Kernel
One morning in reading those very "brilliant" columns entitled "Sneers, Snickers and Scanda!" if the author is really judge enough to write something "merely nicely headed and well written" or not. To judge from what "Mr. Smythefield" says one might suppose that he was as bored with his columns as we are.

If he has lost any idealism which he has ever had of woman, one might guess that he evidently did not know many women who were, as he says, "pure," or that he would deign to notice them if he did see them. Of course, such meeting places as society houses might mean only meeting places for "neekers and neckers" to the writer and one stops to wonder at the worldly biasness with which such a "gifted" writer is endowed.

Surely such a writer will go out and advertise his beloved "Alma Mater" well with such flaming idealism and it is to be hoped that when his college does graduate him that he will eventually find at least one person in the world that he thinks is interesting and not a painful annoyance to him.

A STUDENT
The lady is quite right. We ARE as bored as she is. Perhaps more than she is. Anyway just as much. That is why we are quitting.

Adieu, Kind Friends, Adieu
So, after having expressed our lack of admiration for the ladies of the campus, and after having been applauded warmly for this expression, we come to the wretched, last, but not least, column without feeling—not even "mixed feelings." We still maintain that we have entertained. What more can you ask?
If anyone believes that we have not, let him meet us on the field of honor, there to settle the question of our writing ability. We have told you, our readers, that we have seen many expressions of it in this column.

We hope you have a writer who likes you, next time.

We Have an Idea
Many are the helpful friends who have many times to our love for you, and the suggestion that this column would be a lot better if we paid less attention to the activities of our own fraternity brothers. So frequently has this suggestion been repeated that we go off our halo, come down from our blissing throne of glory, and admit that they are right.

We also are willing to admit, if properly induced, that we have been wrong.

But we are not the sort who asks forgiveness and then repeats his sins. You know us better than that. We have made a resolution. We will never again mention a fraternity brother of ours unless the incident with which he is concerned is uncomplimentary to him or unless mention of him is necessary to a story we are writing about someone else.

After all, we weren't being paid for it.

Alas, Alas
Personally we have a strong admiration for Rudy Valle. If you will only suppress those sneers at a moment, we will tell you about the feeling for the gentleman at the moment.

Entering the seraglio for the first time in years the other night we heard Rudy's voice drifting from what the ladies call their "front room." Surprised and delighted that the etes had passed quickly into the room and found it entirely empty, as was all the remainder of the house.

And, Speaking of the Kimegas
The ladies of Limestone were so enthusiastic in their sales talk to a prospective client Sunday that she fainted. Which makes the other rousers look like heavenly angels, with white wings and everything.

Vocalists May Come
Adelt Mary Jo Armstrong, spotted for appearance on the Blue and White program Tuesday, came to the studios for the presentation. Blue and White Manager Schoenfeld said the lady could not sing, which caused much dissension among orchestra and studio group. The lady did not sing.

Two College Editors Lose Their Positions

Two southern universities, during the past week, have removed the editors of school publications from their positions, according to reports from those campuses. The editor of the Centre Cento and the editor of the Tennessee Mugwump were relieved from their duties.

Theodore Thurman, editor of the Centre Cento was removed from his position and the views of the editor on the subject aroused the ire of the authorities and dismissal followed investigation. Thurman is a resident of Danville.

Barker Addresses Senior Engineers

English Authority Describes Radiation Method Used in England

Arthur H. Barker, eminent English consulting engineer, addressed the seniors of the College of Engineering at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in Dicker hall. His subject dealt with heating by radiation, a method developed by the engineer in England.

Mr. Barker arrived in New York from England on January 25, coming to America to collect material for a paper on "Room Warming by Radiation." He read this paper at the recent convention of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers at Cleveland, of which he is a member. Mr. Barker was accompanied to America by his son, Hugh P. Barker, who is visiting in Toronto on business of electrical heating. The engineer will join his son at Buffalo, and they will sail for home together the latter part of February.

The speaker of the morning began his career as a professor and consulting engineer at the College of London. He did research work at the same time. These three branches of engineering proved to absorb too much of his time and strength, so he gave up his teaching and research work and devoted himself entirely to consulting. Mr. Barker said that 3000 buildings in England were heated by electricity, and that it was found to be much cleaner and cheaper than the old-fashioned "boiler house" method.

Portrait Exhibition Is Open at Night

The self-portrait exhibition at the Art Center is open each night this week for the convenience of those attending the Grand performances of "Berkeley Square," according to an announcement by Prof. E. R. Rannels, head of the art department.

The Louisville Art center has sent word that a group of 20 of its art students will come to Lexington this week to see the exhibition. A number of persons already have come from Richmond for that purpose. Professor Rannels plans talks about the portraits in the exhibition at 7:30 o'clock Friday night.

Library Establishes Rental Department

According to Miss Margaret King, university librarian, a rental collection of duplicate copies of books in the reserved book reading room of the library has been put at the disposal of students for whom it is inconvenient to use the books in the reading room. This innovation went into effect at the opening of the second semester.

The collection, consisting of 100 volumes at present, will be self-sustaining. The income from the rental will be used to add to the present supply. A fee of three cents a day will be charged for the use of the books.

Students Exhibit Paintings, Prints

U. K. Art Department Sends Work to Louisville Show

Oil paintings and prints by students and graduates of the university are on exhibition at the Louisville Art Center this week. They include landscapes painted on the university campus, aquatints, linoleum cuts, portraits done in oils, and still life subjects.

Joy Pride, a graduate, has four landscapes painted on the campus last summer; Altra Stratton, junior in the College of Arts and Sciences, a soft, ground etching, "Factory Yard"; Mabel Palmore, graduate, is represented by two aquatints similar to those reproduced in the current number of Letters; Esther Greenfield, graduate, also has an aquatint; Rita Mount, graduate, two linoleum cuts, one of which is a recollection of a short vacation spent in Florida, and another a view over the rooftops of Cincinnati.

Jean Allen Gibbs, senior in the College of Arts and Sciences, has three oil paintings, each a still life subject. The work of William D. Frazer, senior, Arts and Sciences, is represented by a portrait done in oils; and Norman Neff, senior, Arts and Sciences, has sent the still life which took first award in the College Art association exhibit a year ago.

Cut Recommended in University Budget

A 15 per cent cut in the budget of the university has been recommended by the revenue committee in the state legislature, according to reports from Frankfort. The budget prepared by President McVey and submitted to the budget committee of the legislature had been approved by that body. President McVey could not be reached for a statement concerning the cut in the appropriation and no previous provisions have been made for such a reduction. The budget approved by the budgeting committee of the university was substantially under the appropriation of last year and was in keeping with the economic program of the state. Lexington luncheon clubs have passed resolutions condemning the recommendation and copies have been forwarded to Lexington representatives in the legislature. The cut will affect all state schools alike, it was reported.

Claude Nelson Is Y. W. C. A. Speaker

Claude Nelson, student secretary of the southern region of Y.M.C.A., was the speaker here at the Y.W.C.A. vesper services held at 7 o'clock Tuesday night in the recreation room of Patterson Hall.

Mr. Nelson has been studying conditions abroad and has been working among students in Italy, Russia, and Germany. His subject was "Disarmament," a topic of seasonal interest in view of the disarmament conference now being held in Geneva. Mr. Nelson stressed the importance of disarmament from the view of economic conditions, security, and the part of the movement toward world peace. He brought out the fact that disarmament was a very complex problem, and that any efforts to effectively limit armament would have to include air, land, sea, and chemical machinery for warfare. He also stressed the need for psychological disarmament and the importance of the students of the world becoming actively interested in the whole subject in view of world conditions.

Committee Suspends 129 Student Failures

The Scholarship and Attendance committee at their meeting Wednesday in the Administration building recommended the suspension of 129 students for failure to observe scholastic rules and regulations, according to Prof. T. T. Jones, chairman of the committee. Applications for reinstatement were approved in 55 cases, the committee also reported. Those dropped from school failed to pass scholarship are allowed to apply for reinstatement after a semester's absence.

Action on petitions involving extra work and taking of second examinations were also reported by the committee. The committee meets once a week to take action and investigate the work of students who have been brought before them.

The cost of the average dormitory on the campus is $150.00.

AFFIDAVIT IS SIGNED

An affidavit stating that no out-of-state students had been solicited by them was signed Wednesday afternoon by all members of the university faculty. It has been announced from the office of the registrar. The move was requested by the president of the university in accordance with the state-wide investigation being conducted by the Kentucky Legislature, following a report that such soliciting had been made by members of the faculties of state-owned institutions.

Topic for Paper Named by Tuthill

The subject for the history prize contest for 1932 was announced Wednesday by Dr. Edward Tuthill of the history department. "Did Germany Have Parliamentary Government from 1871 to 1914," will be the topic for the paper. The first prize, $25, will be awarded sometime in May. The papers are due on May 1. Assistance in preparing the work and general directions will be given by Doctor Tuthill. Judges will be announced later.

The contest, which is known as competition for the Bennett Prize is one of the oldest awards given on the university campus, having been established when the university was known as the Agriculture and Mechanics College. According to the history department, the first award was made in 1904.

The subject of the contest, under the terms of the donor, must deal with the general subject of the origin and growth of parliamentary law as distinguished from monarchical law. The papers must be well prepared works and contain references to authorities. Doctor Tuthill said.

State Library May Give Papers, Books

If the bill proposed in the house of representatives authorizing the donation of duplicate copies of books and papers in the state library to the university library becomes a law, several hundred duplicate copies of books on law and other subjects and thousands of papers now held by the state library will be given to the university.

The bill was introduced into the house by Representative Leer Buckley, Lexington, who said that the state court of appeals had informed him that an act of this kind would be necessary to approve the donation of the books. He also stated that he expected no opposition to his enactment when it is introduced into the senate.

Prof. T. D. Clark, of the history department, who has been acting for the library in acquiring documentary materials needed to build up the background collection, has been trying for some time to arrange the duplicate copies of these valuable documents to the university library. These books and documents would add considerably to the present collection at the university, it is believed.

CATHOLIC CLUB TO MEET

Wildcats to Defend Conference Lead

(Continued from page one) Tennessee boasts a giant sophomore star, who has ousted a first-string man of last year from his position. Greenblatt, last year's center caused the 1931 Wildcats plenty of trouble; so this new man mountain must be good. It is said that he would have made the Vol football team had he been eligible. All in all, although they have been defeated by Alabama, the Vols have a good team, and are sure to give the Kentuckians a battle for their lives.

A "Daddy" Boles has his worries in trying to figure how to get more people into the gymnasium. Last Monday the building was jammed to overflowing, and many had to be turned away. The student body is so large that there are only about 100 seats available to the other supporters. This gives advent to a very undesirable condition of ticket-scalping. Another capacity crowd is expected to witness the Vol contest Saturday night.

During the period between halves, the Gamage Trophy will be awarded to the member of the football squad who made the best scholastic standing. Last year it was given to George Skinner.

To date more than 79,000,000 pounds of tobacco has been sold this season. In 1929, a total of 70,173,425 pounds of leaf passed over the breaks of the Lexington houses to establish a record for volume. This record held until this season.
