Roselle wants to give staff, faculty a raise

By JAY BLANTON
Editor in Chief

Reflecting his priority for competitive employee salaries, UK President David Roselle announced yesterday that his University budget for next year will include a recommendation for a 7-percent increase in employee salaries.

"With the very serious competitive salary problems we have, . . . our highest priority is salaries," Roselle told members of the University Senate.

Roselle's budget recommendation goes before the UK Board of Trustees in May or June.

University employees received only a 2-percent salary increase this year following an austere state budget proposal from Gov. Wallace Wilkinson and only a slightly improved budget for higher education from the state legislature.

That situation left University officials fearing a mass exodus of its quality faculty and staff to other universities which could and would pay higher salaries.

The salary raise and other increases, however, will not be extracted without a sacrifice, according to Roselle's budget proposal.

In order to help pay for the increase and other programs, the University will have to dip into its University salary savings, which normally goes for departmental needs, or into a year-end fund balance for college needs such as equipment, graduate assistants, part-time faculty and renovations.

"Next year we are going to take a portion of those funds and budget them up front for our highest priority — salaries," Roselle said. "That's how we are able to give a 7-percent salary increase, rather than a 4- or 5-percent increase."

Although the budget picture for faculty salaries will improve next year, UK remains behind its benchmark institutions in salaries, according to Ed Carter, vice president for administration.

The University currently is about $5,000 behind benchmark schools in faculty salaries, and those institutions will be raising salaries by an average of 5 percent next year.

"This level of increase certainly will not get our salaries to where they need to be," Roselle said, "but it should keep us from losing ground and might allow us to whittle some of the salary gap away."

Roselle said monies for the salary increase are coming from a "modest" $10.5 million increase in state appropriations, and about $1 million from a 1- to 1.5-percent increase in tuition.

In-state students currently pay $884 a semester in tuition. Out-of-state students pay $2,940 a semester.

The budget recommendation also calls for:

- A promotion pool for faculty promotions, and a 5-percent increase for graduate assistants
- A 3-percent increase for operating expenses for all University operations.
- An additional $1 million for operating expenses for academic departments, on top of the $1 million added in 1988-89.

Carter said about $6 million will be taken out of the salary savings Universitywide, of which about $3 million will come from the Lexington campus.

Dipping into the salary savings fund, Roselle said, is "to use an often used phrase — we are eating our seed corn."

Chandler's racial remark draws fire from UK students

By JAY BLANTON
Editor in Chief

Protest and concern swelled yesterday in response to a recent racial epithet by former Civ. A.B. "Happy" Chandler that reiterated a remark he made last year, resulting in controversy on campus and across the state.

Response yesterday to Chandler's most recent remark, appearing in Monday's Kentucky Kernel, ranged from calls for Chandler's resignation from the UK Board of Trustees by one student group to a resolution of concern over the incident from the University Senate.

The latest controversy over Chandler stems from a comment the former governor made to a Kernel reporter Saturday, in reference to last year's controversy.

Accusing the media of sensationalizing last year's event, the two-time former governor told the Kernel reporter in a phone interview Saturday, "that's a lie. I said the Zimbabweans were niggers, and they are niggers."

The remark came before a book signing Sunday at Joseph-Beth Booksellers of Chandler's autobiography, Heroes, Plain Folks and Skunks: The Life and Times of Albert "Happy" Chandler.

Last year, at a BOT investment committee meeting to discuss University divestiture of funds in South Africa, Chandler said, "Zimbabwe's all nigger now."

Chandler's wife, Mildred, said last night that the former governor would not comment on the situation.

Gov. Wallace Wilkinson will issue a statement about the remark today, according to Susan Stone, a press secretary with the governor.

Speaking to members of the University Senate yesterday, UK President David Roselle said last year's statement by Chandler offered him the opportunity to meet with students and implement programs geared toward recruitment of black faculty and students.

"We've had some nice success in these programs," Roselle said.

Roselle reminded University Senate members of that pledge yesterday, telling faculty that they have the right to determine who their colleagues are going to be.

"And whatever opportunities you have to evidence all of the best principles of affirmative action in that program, we salute and we will help you in order to be able to do that," Roselle said.

Roselle will meet with students at 2 p.m. today at the Administration Building. The president received many calls from students yesterday about Chandler's comment, according to University spokesperson Bernie Vonderheide.

Roselle also met with students last year following Chandler's comment, which sparked calls from around the state for his resignation from the UK BOT.

Although he apologized for the statement last year, Chandler refused to resign from the board.

Chandler also received a groundswell of support from several prominent people in the state following last year's remark, including Wilkinson, who reappointed Chandler to the BOT last school year. Until his reappointment, Chandler had been an honorary, non-voting member of the BOT.

Chandler only could be removed from the board through his resignation or if the governor, who appoints some trustees to state university boards, removed him.

But Chandler's remark in Monday's Kernel has put the spotlight again on a man whose public life has been a paradoxical look at race relations in Kentucky and the nation.

As Major League Baseball commissioner from 1945-51, Chandler integrated baseball with Jackie Robinson, a star in the old Negro baseball leagues. As governor for the second time from 1955-60, Chandler integrated public schools before many Southern states did.

Chandler, however, also aligned himself with Dixiecrat Strom Thurmond's candidacy for the presidency in 1948 and with Alabama Gov. George Wallace's 1968 presidential bid. Both men advocated segregation of the public schools.

UK Senate endorses Roselle's handling of probe

By JAY BLANTON
Editor in Chief

The University Senate, in its first public statement on the NCAA probe into the men's basketball program, yesterday unanimously endorsed UK President David Roselle's handling of the investigation.

The resolution, passed during a meeting of the University Senate, said the Senate "highly commends President Roselle, the Board of Trustees and the Athletics Board of Directors for the responsible and professional manner in which they have responded to the charges made by the NCAA . . ."

In addition, yesterday's Senate resolution to the president — also urges Roselle, the BOT and the athletics board to "hold accountable any employees of the University and the Athletics Association who are directly responsible for any wrongdoing."

Last semester, UK Athletics Director Cliff Hagan resigned, citing the cloud over the basketball program caused by the NCAA investigation.

Joe Burch, a member of UK's legal counsel, was named interim athletics director. C.M. Newton, currently the men's basketball coach at Vanderbilt University, was named athletics director earlier this semester.

Published reports also have indicated that UK coach Eddie Sutton may have been named in the University response to the allegations against the basketball program. Another report has stated that Sutton would be fired shortly.

Roselle thanked the more than 100 members of the University Senate at yesterday's meeting for the endorsement, saying "many of you have expressed your support for a thorough, honest investigation of our basketball program to me individually, and I'm glad you're happy to express (it) collectively."

Roselle said it was "terribly appropriate" that the UK faculty insist on an athletics program that complies with NCAA and Southeastern Conference regulations.

"We want to look to the future of this basketball program," Roselle said, "not really so much to the past but to the future."

University Senate Chairman Loys Mather said that once the University's response to the allegations was sent to the NCAA, the Senate felt it wanted to make a statement about how the investigation had been conducted.

"The council felt that at some point it would be necessary . . . for the Senate itself to address the issue," Mather said.

"We feel that now is the appropriate time."

In a nearly yearlong investigation, the NCAA levied 18 allegations against the men's basketball program, ranging in severity from offering cash payments to a recruit to free tickets and transportation to several others.

The University sent its response to the allegations to the NCAA earlier this month after the UK BOT and Athletics Board reviewed the response in a meeting that lasted more than three hours.

The Louisville Courier-Journal recently reported that Sutton may have wanted a high school basketball coach "to give false and misleading information to the NCAA" about the transportation of UK basketball players Eric Manuel and Sean Sutton to a college entrance exam in Lexington in June 1987.

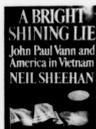

Book on Vietnam War was a 16-year saga for journalist

By BRAD COOPER
Copy Desk Chief

Looking back on her days living at home, 19-year-old Catherine Sheehan cannot remember a day when her father was not working on his book about the Vietnam War.

Anytime something needed to be done or the Sheehan family wanted to do something as a unit, Catherine Sheehan recalls hearing, "Wait till Daddy's book is done."

The writing of "Daddy's book," A Bright Shining Lie, however, would span 16 years before the final manuscript would be turned over to the publisher.

"The optimum phrase in our household was, 'When daddy's book is done . . . we'll get the sink fixed, we'll remodel the bathroom, we'll take a vacation,'" Sheehan said.

That family vacation — the first in more than 16 years — did not come until last month, almost a year after Neil Sheehan turned in the last manuscript for his novel, which is based on the Vietnam War and the life of one of its better-known heroes — John Paul Vann.

The vacation was a welcomed relief for the two daughters who saw their father put himself through an interminable form of catharsis as he researched and re-researched his novel. Catherine Sheehan and her 21-year-old sister, Maria, now have shirts that read, "Daddy's book is done."

For Neil Sheehan, who will speak in the Worsham Theater at 8 tonight, a family vacation only would have caused him more internal strife by drawing him away from his book.

"He would just never feel right or comfortable about getting away when he had this book to finish," Catherine said.

"There were a couple of times when we'd be set to go, and he'd back out. Then my grandmother or someone else would take his place," she said. "I was disappointed, yes, but it was better to know that he had peace of mind."

On a professional level, Sheehan said the book was as much a part of his life as his wife, Susan, — a staff writer for the New Yorker — and their two children.

He started his journalism career as a correspondent for United Press International, covering Vietnam in 1962.

Sheehan would spend another year with UPI in Vietnam and one more for The New York Times before being moved stateside to cover the Pentagon.

The Vietnam War was such an integral part of Sheehan's life and career that he said he believes he was destined to write a book which would attempt to tell the truth about America's demise in Southeast Asia.

"It wasn't that I was obsessed with the war," he said. "It was the major event of my generation, and having started with it, I was consciously drawn to it."

"If I hadn't taken the time to write this book — that is, to set Vietnam in perspective for my country, which is

Bill urges SGA to recognize Palestine

By BETH TONG
Contributing Writer

Five UK student groups held a press conference yesterday to urge the UK Student Government Association Senate to accept a resolution calling for the United States to recognize a Palestinian state.

"We encourage the American people to stand up for what they believe in, namely the freedom and the right of each person to have a dream and to make that dream come true," said Geoffrey Young, a member of Socially Concerned Students.

Black Students Political Caucus, Muslim Students Association, Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity (Mu Theta Chapter), Socially Concerned Students and Students for Peace and Social Justice want SGA to call upon the U.S. government to recognize the state of Palestine and help end the conflict between the Palestinians and Israelis.

Young said it was "the grassroots pressure" that has kept the United States from invading Central America, and he said he hopes this same kind of pressure from universities and groups across the nation could have "a positive impact on the prospects for peace in the Middle East."

"We believe that our student government should take stands on foreign policies because they are the voice of the students, and while student issues are important, things that go on in the world affect all of us, and the student voice should be heard," said Chris Bush, also a member of Socially Concerned Students.

Lyad Khalaf, president of the Muslim Students Association at UK, said that the media has painted a negative picture about Muslims.

"The only time we hear about Muslims is when there is killing. We don't look at the other side," he said. "Let's do something about it."

Bush said that while the groups were pleased with recent U.S. efforts to talk with the Palestine Liberation Organization, they think that it is not enough.

"It was an interim stepping . . . We are saying, 'Let's go the next logical step and go ahead and recognize the Palestinian state,'" he said.

The groups approached College of Engineering Sen. Joseph Elias about sponsoring the resolution, but Elias said yesterday he had not decided how he stands on the issue because he, like other SGA senators, does not know enough about the issue.

Today in 228 Student Center, Robert W. Olson, professor of Middle East history, will speak on "The 1948 Arab-Israeli War and the Creation of the Palestinian Refugees."

The event, along with others this week, begins at 7 p.m.

what I always wanted to do — I always would have felt that there was something that I left unfinished in my life. It would have been a challenge I hadn't accepted."

Sheehan, the former New York Times reporter who revealed the Pentagon Papers to the American public in 1971, will openly discuss how much of a strain it was to write what he termed an "American saga." What Sheehan will emphasize more, however, is why he had to write the book and why it was important for him to research every aspect of the Vietnam War and Vann's life.

"The 16 years were a tremendous ordeal. They were a very difficult period for me and my family," he said.

"At the same time, they made us a closer family, because I was always here (at home) to help raise our two daughters.

"If I had been a daily journalist, I would have been on the road a lot. While writing my book, my daughters always knew where to find me."

After 16 years, the research and the book are completed. More than 2,000 books have been printed.

Maria works as an intern for The New York Times. Catherine is a sophomore at Wellesley College, which is located near Boston. Susan is on assignment for the New Yorker. And Sheehan is pacified at last.

"I set out to try to write a book that would put Vietnam in perspective for my country," he said. "I've done the best I could. I am at peace with myself. In that sense the war is behind me. The war is out of my system."

Roselle proposes a pay raise for UK faculty and staff

Although the 1988-89 budget recommendation is vastly improved from last year's, Roselle said the University is left with "a lot of budgetary problems."

Salaries top that list as the University strives to be competitive with its benchmark institutions, Roselle said.

The president also mentioned the library, which he said is "still a serious problem," as well as computing needs, equipment replacement, and building and grounds maintenance.

To help with future budgets, Roselle said the University is undertaking "new initiatives to increase private support for UK," and working during the 1990 session of the General Assembly "to get these needs recognized and funded."

Chandler draws fire

Chandler's resignation from the BOT following last year's comment, unanimously endorsed a resolution yesterday expressing concern over the comment, and a pledge to look into the situation.

That resolution followed the postponement of another resolution from Student Government Association College of Engineering Sen. Joseph Elias, calling for Chandler's resignation from the board.

Loys Mather, chairman of the Senate Council, said there was "obviously a great deal of sadness and frustration over what may have been said."

But the council, Mather said, was uncomfortable at this point with endorsing the resolution calling for Chandler's resignation from the board until the quote had been verified.

"My only concern is we've just been through a resolution supporting the president (in the NCAA investigation of the men's basketball program). . . . If I thought passing this resolution would lead to the resignation of Chandler, I guess I would be for it . . .," said Malcolm Jewell, a University Senate member.

"I'm a little concerned that the Senate not do anything at the moment that would in any way undermine the president."

The University Senate meets again March 20. But the Senate Council, which is the governing body of the University Senate, meets Monday and could speak for the full Senate on the matter, Mather said.

The Student Government Association Senate will consider the resolution at its Wednesday night meeting.

"It is just another thing to set the University back," said Kennedy James, an SGA senator at large and member of the Black Student Union and the Black Student Caucus. "It is an embarrassment to UK and the state of Kentucky. People are not niggers. They are human beings."

Socially Concerned Students, a student activist group, and other organizations have formed an organization called START. Students Against Racism Together. The group has proposed a resolution asking Chandler to resign from the board by March 8.

If Chandler does not resign from the board, Chris Bush, treasurer of Socially Concerned Students, said the group will ask Wilkinson to remove Chandler from the BOT. If that does not work, Bush said, the group will seek a U.S. Congressional investigation into the incident.

"The statement is reprehensible. The major unfortunate aspect is that it is a repetition. He did it last year, (and) he turned around and did it this year," Bush said. "The man is unrepentant. These are his true views, and we should not tolerate an official of the BOT to maintain these kinds of views and attitudes and state them publicly."

Championship hopes are high as Bat Cats swing into season

By CHRIS HARVEY
Staff Writer

Keith Madison put UK baseball on the map after his team's incredible finish last year. But that was the easy part. Now Madison, in his 10th year, must prove that the UK Bat Cats belong in the national spotlight.

"We have a chance," Madison said, "to have just as good a team or better than last year's team."

He'll be hard pressed to do it. The 1988 Bat Cats were the surprise of the country, coming one game from advancing to the College World Series.

UK was a mystery then. But after a high preseason ranking, the Cats have their work cut out for them now.

"We have to be optimistic. I feel we'll be good," junior shortstop Billy White said. "When I first got here, we were an underdog in every series. I like the idea of people gunning for us."

Along with a Southeastern Conference title, the Cats hope to add a College World Series appearance in their portfolio before the year is over.

"We see participating in the College World Series as a realistic goal," Madison said. "We were only two runs away from the College World Series. Stanford won it, and we feel like we could have won it."

MADISON

"We have to be optimistic. I feel we'll be good. When I first got here, we were an underdog in every series. I like the idea of people gunning for us."

Billy White, UK shortstop

The 23rd-ranked Bat Cats lost a boatload of players, including All-American outfielder Chris Estep and first baseman John Marshall. UK also lost four pitchers who had combined with 27 games.

The biggest blow for the Bat Cats to overcome, however, is the loss of senior second baseman Vince Castaldo, who is out for the year with a knee injury.

"When you lose a guy who led the team ... it hurts," Madison said.

Replacing Castaldo will be Roger Gum, and Madison is hoping he will provide the team with just as much leadership.

"They feel confident with Roger at second," Madison said. "Gum was probably the best backup second baseman in college baseball last year. We were counting on Roger anyway."

Even with the losses, however, Madison said he has plenty of talent at all positions.

In the pitching department, Madison will be counting on senior right-hander Matthew Coleman to be the team's No. 1 starter. Coleman, who was expected to blossom last year, had broken a finger, but he is expected to be at full strength this season.

If UK is to have a successful season, Coleman said the pitching rotation will have to keep its ERA down.

"We have to keep the games close," Coleman said. "Our pitchers will have to come through."

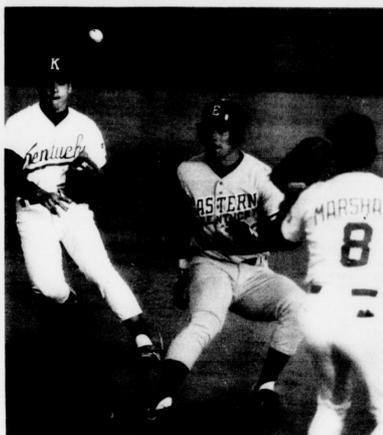

Along with Coleman, Madison said junior right-hander Rod Bolton and senior right-hander Tom Deller will battle for the No. 2 spot. Whoever does not start will be assigned to the bullpen, Madison said.

Senior right-hander Roy Bailey also is looking for a spot in the Wildcats' rotation following his impressive showing in the summer Central Illinois Collegiate League.

Veterans make up the UK infield. Senior Jim Dill and freshman Mike Harris are the top prospects for a starting position at first base.

Dill, who had a solid fall season, makes a good case for starting with his solid fielding and leadership. Harris, a graduate of Lexington-Tates Creek High School, has proved he has a solid bat.

Gum is the top choice for second base, and the "hot corner" will be patrolled by junior Darin Rieman, who had the second most doubles on the team a year ago. At shortstop, junior All-American White is back for another year.

In the outfield, two starters from last year's team return: Mark Blythe and Sam Taylor.

Blythe, a left fielder, is college baseball's "best No. 9 hitter," Madison said.

Blythe had the most home runs last season and is expected to provide punch to the middle part of the Cats' lineup.

Taylor, a right fielder, swung a potent bat last year with a hot .349.

The center field spot is the big question mark for the Cats as junior college transfer Anthony Morrow and freshman Al Lardo are competing for the starting spot.

Playing teams such as the University of Arkansas, the University of Mississippi, Madison said, will help his team mature and be ready by tournament time.

"We may have one of the top two or three schedules in the nation," Madison said. "We probably won't win 50 out of 60 games, but sometimes records are deceiving."

Penn St. hands UK first loss

By DAN PETERS
Staff Writer

Lakeland, Fla. — Penn State University roughed UK pitcher Roy Bailey for 2 2/3 innings and went on to beat the Bat Cats 12-9 yesterday afternoon here at the Tiger Town Sports Complex.

Penn State got to Bailey early when Brad Bowden hit a one-out, two-run home run to make the score 2-0.

Penn State added to its lead in the second inning as Keith Hipka took Bailey long to make the score 4-0.

UK was able to score two runs in the bottom half of the second inning when the Penn State right fielder dropped a fly ball off the bat of Jim Dill with two out and Darin Rieman and Rick Norton on base. Both runners came around to score to close the deficit to 4-2.

UK scored one run in the last of the ninth inning when Mark Blythe and Mike Harris hit back-to-back doubles with no outs.

Todd Horner, who came in the fifth inning and gave up two runs on one hit, got the win for Penn State. Mike MacRoberts went 3 2/3 innings to earn the save.

Bailey, who allowed seven hits, nine runs and walked seven, recorded his first loss of the season.

The loss dropped UK's record to 2-1 on the year while raising Penn State's record to 1-2.

UK's next game is here last at the Tiger Town Sports Complex against the 17th-ranked University of Arkansas, who is 5-0 on the season.

A PALESTINIAN STATE: IS NOW THE TIME?

The Israeli-Palestinian conflict, which has gone on since before the founding of Israel in 1948, affects YOU because a future war in the Middle East could easily get out of control and set off World War Three. Many U.K. students are urging our Student Government to call for the U.S. to recognize an independent Palestinian state to coexist peacefully alongside Israel. The U.S. has just opened a dialogue with the PLO. The proposed resolution would go one step beyond the current U.S. policy of merely talking with the PLO.

COME LEARN MORE ABOUT THIS ISSUE!

6 student groups have set up three evenings of free public events:

TUESDAY February 28: Robert W. Olson, Professor of Middle East History, on "The 1948 Arab-Israeli War and the Creation of the Palestinian Refugees." Student Center Room 228

WEDNESDAY March 1: Open Microphone: A sharing of YOUR questions, views and ideas about the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Student Center Room 228

THURSDAY March 2: The Role of Americans and the U.S. Government: Why the United States Should Recognize a Palestinian State. Student Center Room 359

Hanlon/Sweet exhibit opens

By VICKI GRITTON
Staff Writer

Displaying the intense black-and-white photography of David Hanlon along with the whimsical and humorously crafted furniture of Lynn Sweet, ArtsPlace opens a decadent and dramatic exhibit tonight.

An opening reception for the artists begins at 5 p.m. with music from New Age keyboardist John Rose.

Hanlon's photography deals mainly with the socialization of people. It subtly portrays the college-age population of today's world interacting with each other and the ground upon which they stand. Through his camera Hanlon said he "interprets ways people act with each other and react to certain stereotypes."

Hanlon's photographic environments swing from suburban scenes of street socialization to political benefits to a country fair. All of his characters are ordinary, common people living and learning while not glorified through any pictorial process.

His compositions are distinctively balanced and appear candid with peering eyes staring out from behind a twisted back or faces amid a crowd of turning figures. His photographs are all straight black and white, which he said he finds "is the most direct way to provide direct impact to the viewer."

In contrast to Hanlon's compelling photography is Sweet's "Neo-Classical, Post-Modern, New Wavo-Wavo, Art Wako Furniture."

His tables are made of wood, bronze and a precious coloring of paint. They appear to be something we wish to utilize, yet all functional qualities have been taken away.

"I see an element in furniture," said Sweet, who has been crafting his not-so-practical furniture for close to 20 years.

The tables stare up at the viewer with their own human characteristics. They seem to laugh in their betrayal of being something once brought into this world for our utilization that are now just a concept that only can be looked upon for decoration.

"What intrigues me is denying its nature," Sweet said.

The exhibit will run through April 3 at ArtsPlace on 161 Mill St. Admission is free, and the gallery is open from 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday-Friday and from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. on Saturday.

Hutton receives $9.75 million in lawsuit

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Oscar-winning actor Timothy Hutton was awarded $9.75 million by a jury that decided MGM deceived him about the reason for canceling the 1983 movie "Roadshow."

The Superior Court jury found in an 11-1 verdict on Friday that the studio committed fraud and breach of contract. The jury awarded Hutton $2.25 million in compensatory damages and $7.5 million in punitive damages.

Hutton claimed studio executives told him the picture, about a modern-day cattle drive, was being terminated because the director, Richard Brooks, had suffered a heart attack. MGM lost interest in the movie after a change of management, the actor contended.

direct the movie," said James Tierney, Hutton's attorney.

Hutton, who won an Academy Award for his role in the 1980 film "Ordinary People," claimed MGM deprived him of other possible roles by failing to tell him of its decision for several months.

The month-long trial included testimony from other "Roadshow" actors, Jack Nicholson and Mary Steenburgen, agent Sue Mengers and directors Brooks and Martin Ritt.

Ishmael & Co. Salon announces a
"We need money for New York sale!"

Perms $35
(long hair extra)

Highlights $25
(full highlights $35)

We are going to New York for the International Hair Show and we need money so we are making deals and working longer. Often you see salons that run Perms & highlights all the time so you wonder what kind of deal it is but with us you won't catch this deal again so take advantage of it now. The sale ends March 31 and we're leaving March 4. The Big Apple is calling us so you should too.
