Smoking ban will begin Dec. 11, judge rules

Ban could still be delayed by a higher court; decision upset some students, bar and restaurant owners

By Karen Henderson

Anti-smoking proponents, led by the city of Lexington and the Fayette County Health Department, celebrated Friday when Fayette Circuit Judge Larry VanMeter ruled that Lexington's stalled smoking ban can go ahead as originally planned. Unless the ban is delayed by a higher court as it was before by the Kentucky Court of Appeals, the ordinance will begin Dec. 11, just before UK finals start. The ban was originally set to start Sept. 29. VanMeter's decision has left students and local bar and restaurant owners debating whether it was the right choice for Lexington and how, if at all, the ban will affect business.

In response to the ban, some have proposed keeping bars open until 2 a.m.

Since VanMeter favored the ban in his original ruling in September, proponents on both sides said they were not surprised that he found no reason to delay the ban any further in his latest decision. "I understand Judge Van-Meter's decision, but he's just one person," said John Walters, the lawyer representing the Lexington-Fayette County Food and Beverage Association, which sued the city to stop the ban. "Two Court of Appeals judges gave us an emergency injunction, a temporary injunction, before. We hope they'll do that again."

Walters said the group plans to ask the Court of Ap-

UK signs contract with UnitedHealthcare

New contract will help thousands get UK treatment; until last week, such a deal appeared unlikely

By Hilly Schiffer
STAFF WRITER

UnitedHealthcare insurance members can relax about finding medical care close to home.

The insurance company and UK's Chandler Medical Center announced Friday that, after five months of negotiation, the two sides have signed a new agreement allowing UnitedHealthcare members to receive treatment at UK.

The 15-month contract took effect Friday when it was signed.

About a month ago, a contract was terminated between UnitedHealthcare and the Chandler Medical Center. The two companies were not able to agree on rates for services including neonatal intensive care and trauma care.

If the new agreement had not been reached, the nearly 24,000 UnitedHealthcare customers in Fayette County and surrounding counties would have had to pay the full costs of treatment received at the Chandler Medical Center beginning Dec. 1.

Although Mike Strand, a spokesman for UnitedHealthcare, declined to give any specific details on the agreement, he said he was satisfied with the mutual agreement.

"We are very pleased and happy they have agreed to renew the contract," Strand said.

Last year, more than 500 UnitedHealthcare members were admitted to the Chandler Medical Center, while more than 6,000 received outpatient treatment.

Frank A. Butler, vice president for medical center operations at the Chandler Medical Center, said the reason they needed to terminate the first contract was because the two companies could not reach an agreement on a few key issues.

"Both sides had to give on some issues ... (but we're) both pleased with the outcome," Butler said.

Butler said he was satisfied with the results of the negotiations.

"I think it was at everyone's advantage, especially the patients," he said.

UK is a leading provider for trauma care, transplant service, neonatal intensive care, pediatric care and burn care.

If the new agreement hadn't been signed, UnitedHealthcare participants would have had to go to either Cincinnati or Louisville to receive these special services and have them covered under their insurance plan.

Central Baptist Hospital in Lexington dropped its contract with UnitedHealthcare in 2000 after negotiations broke down. A new agreement was reached in July.

UK to commemorate World AIDS Day

UK's HIV/AIDS clinic targets Eastern Kentucky residents; the clinic will give free, confidential AIDS tests Dec. 1

By Emily Hagedorn
NEWS EDITOR

While about 40 percent of patients from UK's HIV/AIDS clinic come from underserved, rural areas, many more in those areas may be afflicted but afraid to get treatment, the clinic's administrators said.

Because of this, and to commemorate World AIDS Day, the clinic, named Bluegrass Care Clinic, is holding an open house Dec. 1 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the second floor of the Kentucky Clinic.

"Part of the mission of the World AIDS Day is live and let live," said Dr. Alice Thornton, the project's director.

The Bluegrass Care Clinic targets racial minorities and people living in underserved, rural Eastern Kentucky, Thornton said.

While blacks comprise 4.2 percent of the clinic's 63-county service area population, they represent more than 18 percent of the clinic's patients. While in 1997, when the clinic opened, it had one Hispanic patient, Hispanics now make up more than 7 percent of its patients.

The clinic also estimates that more than half of people living with HIV/AIDS in the clinic's service area are not receiving treatment. Dr. Ardis Hoven, the clinic's medical director said.

"They literally have their heads in the sand and are fearful what the community will think about them," she said. "They may not even realize they are at risk."

Separate from the clinic, the center strives to educate healthcare providers throughout Kentucky to recognize and care for those at risk for HIV/AIDS, she said.

By physicians and providers taking advantage of the center, more people may be diagnosed earlier, she said.

"We want to make sure people get into care as soon as possible," Thornton said. "They live longer than those who show up at death's door step."

When someone comes into the clinic, he or she speaks to a nurse case manager, has the opportunity to speak to someone with HIV/AIDS and can discuss whether other people, such as children or partners, need to be tested, Thornton said.

Half of the clinic's patients go on medication, which tremendously lengthens life, she said.

"We are seeing people who expect to have a fulfilling life," Thornton said. "We expect to see them grow old."

Those who come in during World AIDS Day can peruse booths set up by the clinic, Movable Feast, the Episcopal Diocese of Lexington and the Lexington Health Department, among others, Thornton said.

Hopefully, with more education, society will become more accepting of people with HIV/AIDS, he said.

"It is not a gay man's disease anymore," Thornton said. "We would like to break down those barriers."

peals sometime this week to extend the temporary delay until the case can be decided on its merits. He said he won't be surprised if the battle drags on and eventually ends up before the state's Supreme Court.

Mayor Teresa Isaac, who applauded VanMeter's decision as "well-reasoned" and "well thought out," said the appeals court is unlikely to issue another injunction. She said the city and health department are ready to go ahead with the ban.

"The health department has sent kits to all restaurants in town and has extras for anyone who needs them," she said. "Everything has been in place for the ban to go into effect, and it will on Dec. 11."

In his decision, VanMeter ruled on the three major arguments from the Lexington-Fayette County Food and Beverage Association. He found that the local ordinance is not preempted by state law and is not overly broad or vague. He also decided that the ordinance does not unlawfully interfere with the rights of business owners, since the smoking ban is in the best interest of public health.

He referred to other cases, such as a fight over fluoridation of public water in Somerset, as examples of where the government can act to promote public health.

Ellen Hahn, a UK nursing professor and anti-smoking proponent, said she was thrilled with the decision.

"I always knew that public health would prevail," she said. "There are nearly 2,000 smoke-free communities across the country. This is not new."

But it is new for tobacco-rich Kentucky. The ban, which affects almost all buildings open to the public, will be the first of its kind in the state.

Throughout the starts and stalls of the ban war, Pazzo's Pizza Pub general manager Dave Herport has held that the ban is a "ridiculous usurpation of owner responsibility by city government."

"It's the owner's responsibility," he said. "It's wrong to come in and take that. If employees or customers don't like the smoke, they can choose to go somewhere else."

But if the ban goes into effect, Herport is not worried about losing customers.

"We might hurt a little at first, but things will step back up," he said. "We'll be fine with it."

Pazzo's customers, who are mostly students, are evenly split, Herport said.

Jason Garrison, a second year biochemistry graduate student who enjoys the smoke-free floors in Pazzo's, said the ban should have taken effect a long time ago.

"Second-hand smoke kills," he said. "The government has a right to get rid of smoking because people have a right to breathe clean air. How hard is it to step outside and light up?"

Sitting in the smoke-filled Two Keys Tavern down the street, Eddie Bergstrom, a chemical engineering senior, gave voice to the other side of the issue.

"The government has overstepped its bounds," he said. "If you're 21, you're intelligent enough to smoke or not smoke or to be around that smoke."

Judge VanMeter won election to the Court of Appeals Nov. 4 and will be sworn in Dec. 1. Officials have publicly said that VanMeter will not hear the smoking ban case if it is appealed to the court.

Last train to leave WTC on 9/11 returns

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The last New Jersey commuter train to leave the World Trade Center before the twin towers collapsed in the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attack was the first one to return, rolling into a temporary station Sunday with dignitaries and victims' family members on board.

"It's a resumption of normalcy" said New Jersey Gov. James McGreevey. He was joined on the short trip under the Hudson River from Jersey City N.J. to the temporary PATH station by Mayor Michael Bloomberg and New Jersey Sens. Jon Corzine and Frank Lautenberg.

"Today, we're proud and we're pleased to bring back to the people of this region something that was taken from us on Sept. 11," said Anthony Coscia, chairman of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey.

Thelma Stuart, whose husband, Port Authority police officer Walwyn Stuart Jr., was instrumental in safely evacuating that train — and who then returned to the trade center, where he died — rode in the first car with her 3-year-old daughter, Amanda.

"It's a great honor," she said.

As the train surfaced from the tunnel under the Hudson River, passengers saw the construction site that the trade center has become.

The World Trade Center station itself looks stripped down and industrial, with exposed beams and a corrugated steel ceiling. The barebones aesthetic is softened with panels bearing quotations about New York from notables including Edgar Allan Poe and Gene Kelly.

The station, in the northeast corner of ground zero, was restored over 16 months for about $23 million after crews gutted two train tunnels down to their steel frames and installed nearly 7,000 feet of new track. A permanent, $2 billion transit hub will take its place in 2006.

The station is expected to accommodate up to 50,000 passengers a day. Before the attacks, the station handled about 67,000 daily passengers; they had to switch to ferries, cars and buses after the station was destroyed.

Bloomberg said re-establishing transportation between New Jersey and lower Manhattan "is really going to make an enormous difference to many people's lives and be part of the real revival of downtown Manhattan."

Regular passenger service between New Jersey and the World Trade Center station started later Sunday.

Jean Mitchell of Hoboken, N.J., who lost a friend in the attack on the twin towers, was crying as she got off the train.

"It's the same stairs, the (same) newsstand," she said. "It's a victory, an absolute victory."

While dignitaries marked the resumption of train service, about 40 members of groups representing trade center victims held a protest across West Street from the trade center site.

The survivors said they lobbied unsuccessfully to have the reopened station named World Trade Center Memorial Station, and object to the Port Authority's plans to build an additional train track, which they consider an infringement on sacred ground.

"We've been treated like children," said Lee Ielpi, whose firefighter son was killed at the trade center. "From here on in, no more nice guy."

Bulldogs' defense hounds Wildcats

UK sophomore running back Arliss Beach drags the Georgia defense with him during a run in the first quarter. The Cats lost to the Bulldogs 30-10 Saturday in Athens, Ga. Beach finished with 37 yards on 11 carries for the game.

ATHENS, Ga. — UK senior quarterback Jared Lorenzen threw up all morning. Senior wide receiver Derek Abbey battled nerves and the flu. But by the end of the game, Georgia's defense made everyone on UK's roster sick.

Georgia, which entered the game with the nation's second-rated defense, held UK to 212 yards of total offense and beat UK 30-10 Saturday in front of 92,058 fans at Sanford Stadium.

"I knew we were in trouble when we ran the flip play to (running back) Draak (Davis) and he was one-on-one with their defensive end (Quentin Moses) and he's about 280 and he caught (Davis)," said UK defensive coordinator Mike Archer.

Against Georgia's speedy defense, UK (4-7, 1-6 Southeastern Conference) managed to tie the game on the first drive. UK head coach Rich Brooks gambled on that drive. On fourth-and-2 on UK's 8-yard line, junior punter Anthony Thornton took the snap and ran seven yards on a fake punt. Two plays later, Lorenzen dived over a pile of linemen for UK's first and only touchdown with 7:34 left to play in the first quarter.

Georgia's defense became scary after that. Any time the Cats threatened to score, the speed of Georgia's defense answered.

After UK's defense forced Georgia (9-2, 6-2 SEC) to punt from its 2-yard line, UK failed to score with good field position.

Tied at 7 and on Georgia's 40-yard line, Georgia junior defensive end Robert Geathers sacked Lorenzen on third down for a loss of 12 yards, and UK punted from midfield.

Georgia teased UK with scoring opportunities, but each time its defense snatched them away from the Cats.

UGA sophomore linebacker Thomas Davis blocked a Taylor Begley field goal late in the half that would have cut the score to 14-10. Instead, UGA senior kicker Billy Bennett answered with a field goal as time expired, giving Georgia a 17-7 lead at the half.

Within seven points midway through the third quarter, Georgia squashed UK's greatest opportunity. Starting from UGA's 34-yard line, UK crumbled to the Bulldog defense. UGA junior defensive end David Pollack sacked Lorenzen from the ground on third down forcing UK to punt.

"We just got through playing the No. 2 defense in the country, and I can see why," Brooks said.

As sickening as the Bulldog defense was to UK, Georgia's offense caused just as many stomachaches.

CHRIS REYNOLDS | KERNEL STAFF

UK quarterback Jared Lorenzen looks to throw over pressure from Georgia linebacker Tony Taylor. Lorenzen threw for 137 yards.

Each time UK's defense forced Georgia into a third-and-long situation, UGA junior quarterback David Greene found the first down. Georgia was 9-for-17 on third-down conversions.

"The most disappointing thing probably was our inability to get off the field on third-and-long," Brooks said. "It seemed just about anything they wanted to do on third-and-long they made work."

With bowl aspirations shattered, UK will now look toward its own Orange Bowl this Saturday against Tennessee (9-2, 5-2 SEC).

"This is my cousin's (of-fense) tackle Antonio Hall's last game, and it's the last one he is going to see in this uniform," said UK sophomore linebacker Chad

Anderson. "I'll be damned if I let these guys go out with a loss at the end of the year."

Wildcats get defensive, beat Winthrop in opener

Sophomore guard Brandon Stockton (3) and senior forward Erik Daniels double-team Winthrop's James Shuler. UK forced Winthrop into 29 turnovers as they defeated the Golden Eagles 65-44 Friday night at Rupp Arena.

MATT COORS | KERNEL STAFF

By Tim Wiseman
STAFF WRITER

To prepare for UK, Winthrop head coach Greg Marshall made his starters practice against six defenders. He had hoped to recreate the pressure and intensity of UK's defense.

Six defenders may not have been enough. With a struggling offense, UK turned to its trademark defense to defeat Winthrop 65-44 in Friday's regular season opener for both teams.

"Before we left, we put a sixth defender out on the court in practice," Marshall said. "So, we sort of simulated (the defense), but the guy was basically just running around like a chicken with his head cut off."

Winthrop especially could not simulate the defensive presence of senior guard Cliff Hawkins.

With two steals and two forced five-second calls, Hawkins harassed Winthrop guards all night. Hawkins also had seven assists, but it was his defense that grabbed everyone's attention.

"I don't know that there is a better on-the-ball defender," said UK head coach Tubby Smith. "If there is, I haven't seen him."

On offense, senior forward Erik Daniels led the Cats with 15 points, followed by senior guard Gerald Fitch and junior forward Chuck Hayes, each with 12 points.

All three contributed to UK's 21-6 run to open the second half to put the Cats up 53-27 with just over 11 minutes remaining.

With 24 turnovers and 65 total points, UK's offense was far from perfect. Its defense, however, was reminiscent of last season's stretch run. And defense, Daniels said, is what UK is all about.

"Everything starts with our defense," he said. "If we can stop guys, we don't have to worry about scoring many points."

The Cats held Winthrop to a 29.8 shooting percentage and did not allow a single Golden Eagle to score in double figures.

All-Big South Conference senior forward Tyrone Walker had four points and five turnovers.

One of the bright spots for the Cats' offense was 3-point shooting. They made nine of 18 shots from outside.

Sophomore guard Kelenna Azubuike nailed all three of his 3-point attempts on his way to 11 points in his first career start. Azubuike added nine rebounds in a bid to keep his starting spot against Tennessee Tech Nov. 26.

Throughout the game, Smith went to his bench to experiment with a variety of lineups. Eleven different Cats saw action in the first half, and 13 had played by game's end.

"I tell them if they give me the effort in practice, we'll try and find a way to reward them," Smith said.

Among those rewarded with playing time was sophomore guard Ravi Moss, who scored three points and had two steals in 11 minutes of action.

"We know what defense can do for us," Moss said. "That's the way a lot of guys get playing time, like myself. That's what we are going to win games — through defense."

High attendance should continue through season

Derek Poore
KERNEL COLUMNIST

A victory Tuesday night could give an early-season stamp to an already scrappy defensive team.

"Playing a team like North Carolina will be a good challenge for us to see where we are," DeMoss said. "I want to see where we stand."

The fans want to see as well. Kentucky fans are notoriously supportive and highly critical at the same time. UK is one of those places where fans will support the team but pretend they'll stop if the final score doesn't win their approval.

In the past, UK women's hoops hasn't had that type of fan base. Most of the fans seen at Memorial Coliseum for women's basketball games have been the diehards.

After averaging roughly 1,250 fans per game in each of the past 10 seasons — including two years below 1,000 — a new coach, new marketing campaign and cheap season ticket prices ($20) have attracted more fans.

UK is averaging over 3,800 in two games this season, but many of these new fans may falter if the 'I' column starts to fill up. But for now, it's a surprisingly rowdy Memorial crowd.

"I wish you all could have been out there in the middle of that floor and heard all of the people chant 'defense,'" senior center SoSe Helm said after beating Northwestern 67-60 Sunday. "We couldn't hear ourselves talk. They got us back in that game. The audience was our sixth man tonight."

"It felt like we were the men's team," said senior forward Shambrica Jones.

Now the attention turns to a Tuesday night showdown with the team's first top-25 opponent of the year.

Cox DeMoss knows it's her first chance to exhibit the strides this team has made since she took the helm last spring.

"Rupp Arena is such a great place to play, and I'm excited about the crowds that we've been able to attract here," DeMoss said.

Freshman guard Angela Phillips is not nervous about playing in Rupp Arena.

"I'm really excited," Phillips said. "It's a great atmosphere, and I'm excited to play there."

Kentucky fans should be excited as well.

Rupp Arena will be a perfect place for UK fans to show they're more than just fair-weather enthusiasts caught up in DeType. They should pour in and give the Wildcats the edge they need to upset the Tar Heels.

"I had goose bumps when the crowd got so loud in the first half," said junior forward Sara Potts after the Northwestern game. "It's great to know that they are there cheering us on. It brings us more energy."

It's up to the fans to keep that sixth man label when the team's just as bad as it is good.

Gaworecki nets game-winner for Cats in NCAA tournament

UK beats the Cincinnati Bearcats 4-2 in penalty kicks; Cats get third NCAA tourney win in 12-year history

By Leslie Wilhite
STAFF WRITER

All 1,583 fans at the UK Soccer Complex stood silently Saturday night with their eyes glued to UK sophomore midfielder Joey Gaworecki.

After a scoreless regulation and two scoreless overtime periods, Gaworecki was about to make the game-winning penalty kick for the Wildcats.

But UK head coach Ian Collins wasn't watching.

"I didn't watch any of the penalty kicks because I just can't," Collins said. "I'm a little emotional, and it is a nerve-racking thing for me."

The 4-2 NCAA tournament victory for UK over the University of Cincinnati was the third in the soccer program's 12-year history.

And it was full of emotional and nerve-racking plays for both teams.

Within the first 10 seconds of the game, UK sophomore goalkeeper Andy Gruenebaum went to his knees to save a line drive Cincinnati shot on goal.

"They came at us very hard, and you could tell the difference in age and experience," Collins said. "They started 10 juniors and seniors, and we started one senior and a couple of juniors. Our boys were very nervous and tentative in the first half."

Despite their aggressive play, neither team could capitalize on its scoring opportunities.

"I challenged (our players) at halftime to step up and represent our team, each other, the university and the people in the state who paid to watch them play better," Collins said. "And I think they responded in a positive way."

Gruenebaum continued to hold Cincinnati scoreless in the second half, saving three balls. But his Bearcat counterpart, John Adams, also prevented UK from scoring, sending the game to overtime.

Neither team scored in the first overtime, forcing a second 10-minute overtime period. Again, tough defense by both teams sent the game into the penalty kick round.

UK junior midfielder Olli Lehtimäki was the first to kick, but Adams was able to save Lehtimäki's shot.

Then Gruenebaum deflected Cincinnati senior forward Wiremu Patrick's shot off the right goalpost to keep the match even.

"That first save was world class," Collins said. "That would have belonged in the World Cup. It was the greatest save I've ever seen in my life. It was unbelievable."

Senior defenseman Chris Austin netted his penalty kick, giving UK a 1-0 advantage. But Cincinnati's junior midfielder Josh Gardner matched Austin's goal.

UK junior midfielder Jamal Shteivi then made his shot, while Cincinnati senior midfielder Tim Brown missed, giving UK a 2-1 lead.

After UK and Cincinnati traded goals again, it was Gaworecki's turn.

With a swift kick into the net past the outstretched arms of Adams, Gaworecki clinched a 4-2 win for UK.

Gaworecki ripped his shirt off, threw his hands in the air and ran toward the stands, where he was mobbed by his teammates and fans.

"It was definitely one of the best games I've ever been a part of," Gruenebaum said. "Probably the best game I've ever been a part of."

UK advances to play eighth-seeded Indiana University (12-3-5) in the second round of the NCAA Tournament at 7 p.m. Wednesday in Bloomington, Ind.

UK beat IU 2-1 in a pre-season match Aug. 22. The Cats lost 1-0 to the Hoosiers in the regular season Nov. 2.

"We are looking forward to Wednesday's game at IU," Collins said. "I think it should be a good match."

Money is moot when you make gifts

You can make presents for cheap that your friends will definitely like

By Moira Bagley
STAFF WRITER

I'm pretty sure no one has ever asked for one of Grandma's one-size-fits-all orange and brown hand-knitted sweaters on a holiday wish list. But that doesn't mean that when you open that special box with the reused wrapping paper — regardless of whether or not you ever actually wear it — you aren't flattered by the amount of time and thought she put into making it.

This holiday season, you can warm the hearts of your friends and family with homemade gifts, just like Grandma — but with a bit more style.

Here are some ideas for gifts you can make by yourself, regardless of your crafting ability and budget.

Cookie mix jars

Gather all the dry ingredients for chocolate chip cookies. In an empty mason jar, pour ingredients in one at a time, making layers of each. Close lid tightly and tie a bow around the mouth of the jar. Print or type the remaining ingredients and the directions on a label and write a note for a personal touch. Voila! You now have an instant holiday treat without actually having to cook it yourself.

Personalized stockings

Pick up some cheap, fuzzy, red Christmas stockings at Wal-Mart or another discount store. Fill the stockings with candy canes, chocolates and other treats, as well as more personalized items like disposable razors, cheap nail polish, magazines, chap-stick, UK memorabilia, school supplies, etc. Then, with glitter glue pens, write your friend's name on the top of the stocking. This is very easy, and you can usually make a pretty good stocking for less than $5.

Mixed CD

This is a great way to show your friends how much you care. Making a mixed CD can take a lot of time, but it's very rewarding. Compile a CD of your friends' favorite songs or make a CD with songs that remind you of them. You can decorate the case or make a personalized insert and label on your computer. Remember to respect music copyright laws when you make your mix.

Coupon book

I think we all made these for our parents when we were younger, but the idea can still work today, with the help of a little creativity. For a gift for a boyfriend or girlfriend, make coupons for bank rubs, foot massages, dinner and a movie, etc.

If you're good in a certain subject in school, make coupons for friends offering your services, like help on an English paper or free math tutoring. The possibilities are endless, as long as you keep in mind that aesthetics make the difference between a kindergarten craft and a mature, heartfelt gift (i.e. don't make them at the last minute on notebook paper with crayons or pencils because the recipient will be able to tell just how long you worked on the gift).

Cookbook

Compile a cookbook of your favorite recipes. If you don't have very many of your own, ask your mom or grandmother for some of theirs. Another good idea is to gather recipes from your group of friends and make them into a cookbook. For each person's entry, you can write a little story about him or her alongside the recipe. Then, print them on festive paper, punch a hole in the top and tie a ribbon for a quick and easy binding. Distribute the cookbooks back around your circle of friends and you will be the ingenious and crafty holiday hero!

Throw a holiday potluck party

This is a great way to get all your friends together without doing much work and getting all the credit for a great party. Print up invitations for your friends and request that they bring enough of a specified item to serve the total number of guests invited (make sure to have them RSVP). You prepare the main dish, provide the drinks and decorate.

8 MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 2003 KENTUCKY KERNEL

QUOTE OF THE DAY

The government has overstepped its bounds."

— Eddie Bergstrom, chemical engineering senior, on the smoking ban that was passed Friday.

IN OUR OPINION

Smoking ban debate is finally over — hopefully

Another chapter in the saga of Lexington's long-running smoking ban debate found closure in Fayette Circuit Court on Friday, when Judge Larry VanMeter ruled to let the prohibition take effect Dec. 11.

But bothersome as it is, the book itself may not be finished yet. Members of the Lexington-Fayette County Food and Beverage Association say they plan to continue pushing their appeals of the ordinance.

"Two Court of Appeals judges gave us an emergency injunction, a temporary injunction, before. We hope they'll do that again," John Walters, an attorney representing the association, told a Kernel reporter.

The Kernel editorial board has had mixed feelings and several discussions on whether the ban should stand in its current form. One thing is for sure — it should be passed without further debate. It's getting tiresome to see this issue continuously dragged through the public eye with litigation, and hopefully the swell of this storyline is finally behind us.

The debate had reached a standstill and needed to be resolved.

The past few months have also been confusing for many Lexington residents who go to restaurants and bars uncertain whether smoking is permitted. With the issue decided, at least they won't have to wonder anymore.

One problem, however, is the choice of a date for the ban to take effect — four days before UK's finals week begins. There may be an infinite number of ways for students to alleviate the stress of that last week. But simply put, smoking can be an effective means of making the experience a bit more tolerable.

It's getting tiresome to see this issue continuously dragged through the public eye with litigation."

DeMoss must prove herself for accolades

Adam Sensibaugh
 CONTRIBUTING COLUMNIST

Barnhart named Mickie DeMoss as the new women's coach. DeMoss replaced former coach Bernadette Mattox in an attempt at reshaping the women's program and hopefully bringing back the success that had been missing over the past several seasons.

At a university so filled with tradition that Lexington is considered by many the "Basketball Capital of the World," why does the coming season seem to be geared toward a coach and not DeTeam, DePlayers or even DeUniversity?

The UK basketball program has, from season to season, year to year, generation to generation, established and maintained a winning tradition. Yet as I stood at Midnight Madness just a few short weeks ago, I had the feeling that the tradition UK had so rightfully earned did not resemble what it had in past seasons.

At the beginning of Midnight Madness, coach DeMoss was carried into Memorial Coliseum on a platform as if she were the Queen of all the land. It is then when I thought to myself, "What has Mickie DeMoss done to deserve such treatment?" I want to see the women's program succeed just as much as the next person, maybe more, but coach DeMoss needs to realize where she ranks among UK's storied history. Adolph Rupp (876), Joe B. Hall (297), Eddie Sutton (88), Tubby Smith (164), and the coach who currently resides 65 miles west of Lexington (219) have a combined 1,644 coaching victories, not to mention seven National Championships.

But as this 2003-04 season opens, we are not making billboards about perhaps two of the best shooters in the women's game (Jenny Pfeiffer and Sara Potts), one of the biggest post players in the SEC (SeSe Helm), or even players that have earned "billboard status," such as UK's all-time leading scorer — man or woman (Valerie Still with 2,763 points). Instead, we are spending our time promoting an unproven coach with unearned distinction.

Reportedly, DeMoss was brought to UK mainly because of her recruiting ability, but a recent ESPN.com article reports "No Mickie DeMoss, No Problem," citing that her former school has the No. 1 recruiting class in the nation. "Blue Star" editor Mike Flynn states, "This is the greatest recruiting class in the modern era."

So if coach DeMoss is the top recruiter, why is UT ranked No. 1? Many forget that while coach DeMoss had success at UT, she was under the supervision of one of the game's greatest — Pat Summitt.

As a head coach, DeMoss has only won 40 percent of her games, not to mention she is currently 4-31 versus SEC teams — not exactly the success ratio most of the Bluegrass faithful are accustomed to. In fact, DeMoss's predecessors average 54 more wins with Kentucky than she has in her entire career.

None of these coaches — men or women — were ever carried into Memorial Coliseum. So as we enter another basketball season, what should all of the DeMoss hype be about? Certainly not an unproven coach in one of the toughest conferences in college basketball. Certainly not Mickie DeMoss.

Adam Sensibaugh is a sports management senior. His views do not necessarily represent those of the Kernel.

WEEK IN REVIEW

Here's a look back at events and issues from last week. If you want to sound off on any of these, e-mail the Dialogue desk at dialogue@kykernel.com.

MONDAY

Robert McCowan, former chairman of the UK Board of Trustees, died Nov. 12 from complications caused by Alzheimer's disease, the Kernel reported. He was 75. McCowan served on the BOT from 1981 to 1989 and served as chairman from 1984 to 1988. He and his wife were known for their generosity to UK. They donated $1 million to the Sanders-Brown Center on Aging in 1983. He was also recognized for his leadership skills and pride in UK.

TUESDAY

The possibility of Lexington bars selling alcohol later than the current 1 a.m. cutoff has adults evenly split with 47 percent on each side of the debate, according to a poll by the UK Survey Research Center, the Kernel reported. Although many bar owners are in favor of the idea, others say it sounds like the government is trying to unfairly compensate for the proposed smoking ban ordinance. The research center said the survey showed few people would take advantage of the later bar hours.

WEDNESDAY

Many campus trees, including some older than the university itself, have either died or are starving for nourishment because of damage caused by construction, and nothing is being done consistently to prevent the harm, the Kernel reported.

Jerry Hart, a UK horticulturist, says the dying trees are a loss of $10,000 to $15,000 each for UK, and they are also an aesthetic loss.

THURSDAY

Police in Santa Barbara, Calif., said a warrant had been issued for the arrest of Michael Jackson, the pop singing icon, on multiple counts of child molestation opening a new chapter in a life of global fame, untold riches and odd behavior, the New York Times reported.

FRIDAY

The City Council voted 12-2 in favor of the keg tagging ordinance, the Kernel reported. The ordinance requires retailers to put a keg identification tag on all kegs of six or more gallons. The tag can then be traced back to the keg purchaser.

Lack of athleticism, depth is UK's bane in the SEC

UK's matchup against Georgia on Saturday showcased the Dawgs' bite versus the Cats' meow. UK wasn't just beaten by the Bulldogs. The team was, as Defensive Coordinator Mike Archer said, "out-athletic."

Need proof? Running back Draak Davis, considered one of the fastest players on the team, took a pitch from quarterback Jared Lorenzen from the left side in the first quarter. As Davis attempted to turn the corner, he was met and stopped by two Bulldog linebackers for barely a one-yard gain.

You could blame poor blocking by the offensive line, but you must credit Georgia's athleticism. The Dawgs' speed is what makes their defense ranked No. 2 in the country. But their athleticism is what separates them from UK.

UK just doesn't have the players to compete year in and year out with Georgia, Florida, LSU and Tennessee. You may point to the Florida game as one the Cats let slip away, but Florida prevailed because of its athleticism. It's that simple.

In the ultra-athletic SEC, Brooks admits he doesn't have enough athletic players to ascend to the upper echelon of the conference.

Speed, strength and size are what it takes to win in this conference. Add those three elements up and it equals athleticism. Or in this case, Georgia.

The Dawgs were all over UK on Saturday. Lorenzen never got in a rhythm under center. Brooks said the quickness of his receiving corps — or lack thereof — and the speed of Georgia's secondary resulted in Lorenzen continually throwing slightly passes. Lorenzen averaged slightly better than four yards per pass.

On the defensive side, UK looked befuddled at times. Several demoralizing third-and-long conversions by Georgia that kept momentum in its favor.

As we know, that doesn't tend to happen against Indiana or Mississippi State.

"They've just got a lot of freaks," linebacker Chad Anderson said of Georgia. "We don't yet."

Anderson's comment was meant as a compliment — toward Georgia, of course.

If Brooks and his coaching staff want to add more "freaks," they need to recruit more "freaks." And UK lowers know that will be tough with the reduced scholarships in the coming years.

Speed is the necessary ingredient for a good — no, make that a great — result in football. UK does have the athletes to be competitive at times, but my guess is that no more than three players on UK's current defense could start at the SEC's aforementioned Big Four.

So with UK officially out of bowl contention and this gut-wrenching season coming to an end, the Cats must welcome their neighbor from the south, Tennessee, this week.

UK will treat its game against the Orange Crush as its bowl game. But the game should be used more as a measuring stick for next season.

UK will probably see players similar but maybe not as talented as Georgia.

And if the team does its homework, it should know the following:

Speed, size and strength kill.

Just ask Draak Davis.
