Hemenway withdraws candidacy

By GREGORY A. HALL
Senior Staff Writer

A presidential search at the University of Nebraska, in which Chancellor for the Lexington Campus Robert Hemenway was a finalist, nears its conclusion with remarkable similarities to the recently completed search at UK.

Hemenway and the two other remaining finalists withdrew themselves from consideration yesterday, leaving the NU Board of Regents with interim President Martin Messergale as the only interviewed candidate entering Tuesday's meeting.

Four finalists were announced last Friday by the search committee that told its regents they could look at any internal candidates. The four finalists and Messergale were interviewed last weekend in Kansas City. On Tuesday, Gene Budig, Kansas University chancellor, became the first to withdraw.

Despite calls for a new search from the faculty senate at NU's Omaha Campus, Regent Rosemary Skrupa said that a new search would be impractical, as a session of the Nebraska legislature approaches.

Meanwhile, in his withdrawal statement, Hemenway said he was "happy" at UK.

"UK is one university of 60,000 students committed to making a difference for the entire commonwealth," Hemenway said. "I want to be a part of that effort."

A question now facing Hemenway is whether he can convince UK that he is not looking for an opportunity to leave.

UK President Charles Wethington said he was pleased that Hemenway is staying at UK and that his decision would "end the uncertainty."

Wethington was selected president in September after a controversial search in which he, as interim president, was allowed to be a candidate. Four finalists were named by UK's search committee, and two dropped out before coming to campus. One finalist other than the interim president visited UK.

Wethington said he does not believe Hemenway will be looking for other jobs.

The NU post presented "unusual conditions that you would not normally find," he said.

Hemenway is a Nebraska native and an NU alumnus.

University Senate Chair Carolyn Britt said Hemenway's personality had made it obvious that "ultimately he was going to want to have a university of his own to run."

She said she does not expect that Hemenway will be looking for just any presidency.

But NU regents say Hemenway was a strong candidate.

"You have a real gem in Dr. Hemenway," regents chair Don Blank said. He referred to Hemenway's credentials and references as "impeccable" and called the UK chancellor a "tremendously impressive man."

While the chilly October wind blew outside, freshman Kim Whobrey sat in her UK residence hall room and read a letter that described a sweltering, colorless desert.

Serviceman William Carter wrote the letter to Whobrey in response to a letter she had sent Sept. 10 — the start of the Green Ribbon Program sponsored by a UK residence hall. As part of the program, students began writing letters to U.S. service officers stationed in the Gulf since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait in August.

Patterson Hall, which houses 114 women, provided supplies for the letter-writing idea. "My mom reminded me of how family and friends wore the identification tags that belonged to POW's in Vietnam. Wearing green ribbons reminds people on a daily basis of the situation in Saudi Arabia," Lang said.

In a letter received from Lt. Robert Stampf, he said the letters are a positive sign from college students today, especially considering the controversy that U.S. troop involvement in Vietnam generated on college campuses.

He called the support a "welcome change" after the infamous police action. Maj. Pat Armstrong, a 1978

Forum discusses Iraqi war chances

By MARC DALEY
Contributing Writer

A professor and a director of the the University of Southern California's political science department held a forum Wednesday night to clear up confusion some students and faculty have about the Persian Gulf crisis.

The forum, "Flashpoint: Middle East Crisis," was sponsored by the Student Government Association.

The speakers, Robert Kline, a professor in USC's political science department, and Richard Dekmejian, department director, spoke about Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and the military build-up in the region.

Saddam is a "very complex totalitarian leader that has, at his disposal, an arsenal which was built by countries such as the Soviet Union, Italy, and Germany," Kline said.

This arsenal consists of about 5,000 tanks, 70 anti-aircraft rockets and one million troops — 450,000 stationed in Kuwait and 550,000 in Iraq. Most of the tanks were supplied by the United States and Great Britain.

Also, Iraq has a mid-range missile, known as the "Scud" missile, developed by the Soviet Union, which could present the biggest threat to world peace if launched into Israel, Kline said.

Kline said this arsenal sets a scenario for war when coupled with a man who he termed "someone who represents a threat to not only Middle East stability, but, quite frankly, to world stability."

Kline called this possibility of war "ironic ... considering it's close to one year after the destruction of the Berlin Wall," and said such a war could result in the loss of 50,000 to 75,000 U.S. troops in four to seven days.

The confusion some have about the conflict stems from the uncertainty many Americans have as to why American troops are in the Middle East. Kline said while no one has clearly articulated why the United States is there and why soldiers' lives are at risk, part of the reason 200,000 troops are in Saudi Arabia is to protect economic interests — mainly the oil America receives from the Saudis.

By the beginning of next February, 500,000 troops will be in Saudi Arabia, plus the "world's largest naval armada," six aircraft carriers, and "extremely sophisticated communication equipment."

Despite moves to avoid another situation like the Vietnam War, Dekmejian said "it's going to be very difficult for the Bush administration to justify an attack on the Iraqis, unless Bush is able to go to the American people after he has tried to negotiate peace with Saddam Hussein." Also, the President rejected a plan by Congress to hold a joint session for the purpose of expressing the will of the American people.

"This is dangerous, unless the American people are willing to fully support the war effort," Kline said. He said he thinks this will be highly doubtful, especially once support for troops dies down and U.S. casualties

UK tree auction to aid foundation

By JOETTA LYNN SACK

The Kidney Foundation of Central Kentucky means something special to UK student Bethanie Hargett — last December she donated one of her kidneys to save her older sister's life.

"There was never a doubt in my mind that I was going to do it," she said. "I would do it for anybody ... I can't imagine not doing that for somebody."

This year, Hargett, an assistant hall director at Blanding Tower, is again extending her generosity by helping coordinate the Trees of Life festival fund-raising project at UK.

Seventeen residence halls and seven sororities are participating by decorating donated Christmas trees. The trees will be displayed at the Red Mile Grandstand for two weekends and then will be auctioned off.

"We're going to try to get the residents involved to decorate ... but mainly the hall governments are doing it," she said.

Each 4.5-foot tree will have a theme chosen by the individual group. Hargett said she expects the trees to bring at least $50 or $100 apiece, and all proceeds will go to the Kidney Foundation.

The trees will be displayed Nov. 23-25 and Dec. 1-3. University Day will be held Saturday Dec. 3, and UK students will be admitted half-price with an identification. Former UK football coach Jerry Claiborne will sign footballs, and the UK Pom Squad and Brass Quartet will perform.

"Everyone's invited to attend," Hargett said.

For more information, contact the Kidney Foundation of Central Kentucky at 277-8259.

When UK hosts University of Florida in its last home game tomorrow afternoon, the Cats will be 21-point underdogs.

What better way to celebrate UK's last home game than with an upset of the fifth-ranked Gators?

But as even the most uninterested fan knows, the Steve Spurrier-charged Gators may be the toughest team on UK's schedule. With a combination of flash and strength, Florida has trampled and streamlined through teams all season.

"There will be a time in which we are heavy underdogs and we whip somebody," UK coach Bill Curry said. "That needs to happen. What this team has to decide is if they would like for that to be now."

Florida (8-1 overall, 3-2 in the SEC) has stacked up some impressive numbers — both offensively and defensively.

"This is far and away the best team we've played this year," Curry said. "I cannot remember when I've been more impressed with a football team than I am (now with) this Florida team. ... All that does is cause us to work hard and to prepare better to get ready to play our best game."

Offensively, Florida ranks No. 1 in the Southeastern Conference. Led by quarterback Shane Matthews, the offense has rolled up an average of 439.7 yards per game in total offense.

Matthews, known for his cool control of the gridiron, has thrown for 2,298 yards and 17 touchdowns this season and is averaging 255.3 yards a game, while completing 61.4 percent of his passes.

UK (4-5 overall, 3-2 SEC) must put pressure on Matthews if it wants to stop Florida's offense.

"I think that we can do things to get pressure on him," noseguard Joey Couch said. "I just think that it's going to take a little extra effort. We're really going to have to play our best game — our best game individually on the field."

Curry's basic defensive plan is to try to baffle Matthews with his multiple-set defense.

"We have got to start by finding

On recruits: Pitino likes what he's seen and signed

By RICK GREENE
Staff Writer

After signing out all four eligible recruits for the coming season, UK coach Rick Pitino yesterday discussed the players whom he had signed.

As expected, Chris Harrison, Andre Riddick, Aminu Timberlake and Dale Brown signed national letters of intent to play for the Wildcats. The four recruits committed in the outset of the early signing period (Nov. 14-21).

Harrison, who is a senior at Tollesboro High School this season, was the only signee from Kentucky.

"We only want players that want us as much as we want them," Pitino said. "That type of desire is important to us. We're going to win with these kind of players."

Harrison, a 6-3 guard who averaged 32.7 points, six rebounds and four assists per game as a junior, orally committed to UK last November.

Timberlake, a 6-9 forward from Chicago's De La Salle High School, made his commitment

PITINO

Riddick, a 6-9 center from Brooklyn, N.Y., will add a new dimension to UK's in-season game, Pitino said.

"Andre Riddick gives us something we don't have right now," Pitino said. "He's an outstanding shot blocker and that's something we need."

Riddick averaged eight blocked shots to complement his 14 points and 12 rebounds a game last year at Bishop Loughlin High School.

Timberlake, a 6-9 forward from Chicago's De La Salle High School, made his commitment shortly after UK's annual Midnight Madness, which kicked off UK's basketball season.

"You recruit on potential more than anything else," Pitino said. "Both of these players (Riddick and Timberlake) will be (NBA) draft choices if they have the desire."

Timberlake averaged 12 points, eight rebounds and four assists a game as a junior at De La Salle.

But Riddick and Timberlake will have to bulk up, Pitino said. "Their weight really didn't concern me too much, because we've got the best facilities and the best strength coaches in the country," he said.

Brown, a 6-3 guard from Mississippi Gulf Coast Junior College, may be the biggest impact player of the four.

"A shooting guard is a missing link in our team right now," Pitino said. "We couldn't afford to have a player come in and make freshman mistakes."

Chris Webber, a 6-9 center from Detroit, is another possible recruit for UK. If Webber chooses UK, which has handed out all of its possible scholarships, an exchange is expected to be made.

Deron Feldhaus, known for his selfless play, may give his scholarship to Webber.

"My players are like a second family to me," Pitino said. "I told Deron it was completely up to him. I told him if he was uncomfortable with the situation we would not do it."

Canadian invasion to test two UK teams

Staff reports

Four-year coach Sharon Fanning and her UK Lady Kat basketball team, in preparation for the upcoming basketball season, will take on the Canadian National Team tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Coliseum.

Eight players return from last season's National Women's Invitational Tournament Championship team. These players, plus seven freshmen, will take on the Canadians.

Fanning said the Kats will face tough — and tall — competition tonight.

"From what we can tell, Canada is very deep in terms of 6-foot-2 players starting and 6-foot-2 players coming in," Fanning said.

And the Canadians, with an average age of 25, have the experience to use that height to their advantage. The squad is coming off a 73-68 victory over the Vanderbilt Lady Commodores Monday in Nashville. The win came after an 88-77 loss to the University of Tennessee.

Center Janet Fowler, one of the 6-foot-2 players Fanning mentioned, led Canada in the loss to Tennessee with eight rebounds and 27 points. Her points included an impressive 12 points on 13 attempts from the line.

Fowler and her backup, Andrea Blackwell, also 6-foot-2, make up what could be considered Canada's twin towers.

In the loss, Fowler also drilled a three-pointer. The three-point shot is something, Fanning said, that the Canadians have going for them.

"Every player on the team can shoot the three-point shot," she said. "They are offensive and they're aggressive."

Other top Canadian players include guard Karla Karch, who led them in the win over Vanderbilt with 16 points and forward Anna Stammberger (10 points).

Leading the Kats will be junior guard Kristi Cushenberry, who averaged 20.5 points a game in the team's four Blue-White scrimmages.

Cats seek victory, status

By AL HILL
Staff Writer

The Cool Cats' chances of going undefeated this season have returned, thanks to a Southern Collegiate Hockey Association report.

The question is, with a tough schedule ahead of them, can they achieve it?

The Cool Cats (8-0) had this season's only loss erased after a ruling was handed down this week from the SCHA Commissioner's office. The Georgia Bulldogs, who beat the Cool Cats Oct. 27 by a score of 7-6, were disqualified after three players were found to be ineligible.

That undefeated status, however, will be seriously challenged by a group of Canadians — "born with skates and sticks in their hands," said their coach, Carlo Caterello — this weekend.

Haileybury College, the Ontario College Athletic hockey champion in 1988 and last year's runner-up, has brought 20 players, along with 25 fans, to Lexington.

Haileybury, which has averaged ten goals a game this season, will test the Cool Cats' own sticks and skates in what figures to be UK's toughest games of the season. The games will be played at 10 p.m. tonight and tomorrow night.

The stiff competition is exactly what the burgeoning UK hockey team needs to gain the high-profile status it is seeking, according to team players.

"The reason we are playing them (Haileybury College) is the National Tournament Committee said it would look good for us to play them — better competition," said Cool Cats defenseman Jeff Cooper.

When scheduling Haileybury, the Cool Cats had the goal of competing in the National Club Hockey Tournament — a step up from the SCHA — in mind. The tournament features the eight top club teams in the United States battling for national dominance on the ice.

The Cats, who won the SCHA Championship last season, have already shown their dominance in the South.

But to win a berth in the National Tournament, the Cats are starting on an international level.

The Haileybury Miners have already beaten some of the better Canadian teams, including Ontario's second-ranked team, Seneca College.

"A lot more stick work, a different style, (Haileybury) is more physical than teams we're used to playing," Cooper said of this weekend's opposition.

Heart concert gave eclectic mix

By MICHAEL L. HUFF
Contributing Writer

Two of the most popular rock bands in the world performed before an audience of thousands Wednesday night at Rupp Arena. The crowd was ready to experience a fantastic show with two bands it grew up with — Heart and Cheap Trick.

The evening started with the loud and rebellious sounds of Cheap Trick. Lead vocalist Robin Zander was in top form, and many of the songs Cheap Trick performed were very demanding on his vocal chords. But it hardly fazed Zander until near the end of the performance.

The group opened their performance with "Busted," the title track from their latest album of the same name.

The crowd didn't get into the act quite as expected at the beginning, but fortune was good for the veteran band. As soon as the audience heard "Allo Kiddies," people began dancing and singing along.

Perhaps the loudest and best reception from the audience came with Cheap Trick's performance of the all-time classic "I Want You to Want Me."

The audience sounded like a Pepsi when you first pour it and hold it up to your ear.

Among the new tunes were "Wherever Would I Be?" and "Can't Stop Falling Into Love." Those songs were performed almost flawlessly and sounded great.

The slower tempo of "Don't Be Cruel" didn't prevent audience interaction.

Although the new material sounded great, the classics still won the evening, especially after a disappointing version of "The Flame." Probably the best song during Cheap Trick's show was the classic, "The Dream Police." The band got so carried away that Nielsen had to replace a broken string during the tune.

Then, the headlining act emerged from the darkness. Clad in velvet and leather, the band looked like a group of rock 'n' roll soldiers. Heart opened with "Falling From Grace" as people in the audience almost lost their minds.

The harmonies of Anne and her sister Nancy were tight and impressive. Anne's voice was a little shaky through the first two tunes, but even professionals like Anne have been known to get stage fright.

But no one cared anyway and the audience was not let down in the least.

"How Can I Refuse?" was flawless. The Wilson sisters are still going strong in the vocals department after so many years of good music. It is really hard to believe how the years can be so partial to so few people, and the women of Heart are among the fortunate few.

Heart tried a nasty funk groove for "Straight On for You." It worked like a charm and showed just how versatile the band actually is.

Of course, the band did plenty of new songs off their latest album,

Brigade, including a passionate, "I Didn't Want to Need You."

The light show and stage set was hip and artistic. The lights had all the colors of the spectrum, and the drum stage was high and geometrically sharp. Although the new album is no new direction for Heart, the look of an ultra-modern stage and colonial looking outfits was a real contrast.

Nancy gave an awesome performance on "Stranded." The show was long, but these women had voices that could go the distance and then some.

A listener of music in many genres will note the extensive use of acoustic instruments in Heart's act. This band has an excellent folk influence.

The show was an eclectic mix that catered to everyone from screaming teen-agers to rock fans of past generations.

Anne is known for her flute-playing on occasions and also plays an autoharp on "Under the Sky." This was a dreamy ballad about "sleeping under the stars." Heart displayed a real flair for the romantic and soft.

Then it was time to rock again. Almost everyone there sang along with a rocking rendition of "If Looks Could Kill." The band's friendly interaction with the audience gave a personal air to the show — at least to those who were sitting on the floor.

A romantic "These Dreams" was performed to near perfection.

Nancy had a little trouble with the highest notes in the tune, but it hardly affected the overall performance.

However, "Never," proved a fairly weak live tune. The use of guitar and synthesizer can be a fairly difficult job for one person, and it took away the musical depth of the song. The audience sang along anyway.

The synthesizer platform moved forward on "Alone," originally intended to be the last song of Heart's show. But the audience would not allow it. Screams of "Barracuda" filled the arena. The audience was hungry for more Heart and didn't become tacit until they got it.

Everyone was treated to more "make you guys swoon" romance with "What About Love?" Many men serenaded Wilson with proposals while she played and sang her heart out (no pun intended).

The audience refused to leave. There was to be no rest for the weary in Rupp Arena that night as many in the audience screamed for "Barracuda."

The band gave one of the finest performances of the evening with this one, probably Heart's most popular classic song. If Heart had left Lexington without this vital performance, not many people would have felt as satisfied.

After the song was finished, the screaming and cheering subsided somewhat.

The entire group gave a bow to their loving fans and left.

'Jacob's Ladder' stimulates mind, excites emotions

By MICHAEL L. JONES
Senior Staff Writer

Like the central figure in Franz Kafka's "The Trial," Jacob Singer (Tim Robbins) is being punished without knowing the crime he has committed. Demons with vibrating, featureless heads are turning his waking hours into nightmares and murdering his friends.

He knows it has something to do with his last day in Vietnam, a day he can't remember. But everyone around him seems convinced that he should never know his crime.

The recently released "Jacob's Ladder" documents the blurring of the line between reality and fantasy in Singer's mind.

Director Adrian Lyne attempts to take you, along with Singer, on a trip through the hell that lies in the mind. But the end result is just utter confusion.

In "Jacob's Ladder" a little confusion could be a good thing, but Lyne takes it overboard.

The story is told from Singer's point of view. The camera isn't omniscient — we learn things only when Jacob does.

This works in the case of the demons. We are forced to react to them at the same time and in the same way Singer does. We never know if they are real or not.

However, because Singer doesn't verbalize his resolutions, the end becomes confusing.

Were there really demons on his trail or was it just good drugs (as one character suggests)? Scriptwriter Bruce Joel Rubin ("Ghost" and "Brainstorm") leaves that for you to decide.

Robbins gives an excellent performance as Singer. Best known for his comedic work in "Bull Durham," "Tapheads" and "Erik the Viking," he plays Singer as an everyman, someone with nothing exceptional about him. His subdued performance seems to say, "Hey, this can happen to anyone. Even a guy like you or me."

Elizabeth Pena ("La Bamba" and "Stand and Out in Beverly Hills") is a standout in her under-utilized role as Jezzie, Jacob's spirited girlfriend.

Like all of Lyne's films ("Fatal Attraction" and "9 1/2 Weeks"), this film looks great. The demons, modeled after figures in a Francis Bacon painting, are haunting, not gross. Lyne knows that what you don't see can scare you as much as what you do see.

"Jacob's Ladder" is not the most terrifying movie of the year, but the concepts it deals with are good food for the brain.

R<sup>2</sup>PE to rap tonight

By MIYAN CROSSWHITE
Contributing Writer

You may be asking yourself, what is this? To three Louisville natives, William Finney, Mitchell Douglas and Damon Coe, their name has several translations but sums up a way of thinking that bonds them by its meaning. These three are a group of aspiring rap artists trying to get into the music business.

The current three-member group was brought together in the spring of 1987. Despite problems, the trio stayed together because of their close friendship and desire to be the best.

"Basically the purpose of our music is to try to take music back to an art form, as it used to be, without all the razzmatazz," said one of the group members.

The group will perform tonight at 7 in a variety show at Memorial Hall.

Canadian ballet premieres in Louisville

Staff reports

Les Grands Ballets Canadiens, the premier Canadian dance company and one of the world's most respected ballet troupes, will perform at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Kentucky Center for the Arts in Louisville.

The performance is the second event in this season's Bingham Endowed Series and the centerpiece of the Center's Canadian arts festival.

The Les Grands program will reflect the company's diversity and accomplishment in both traditional and modern ballet. Scheduled for performance are Balanchine's "Pas de Deux" from "Swan Lake," Nacho Duato's "Na Floresta" and two works by James Kudelka.

Kudelka, the company's resident choreographer since 1984, has been called "the most imaginative choreographic voice to come out of ballet in the last decade" by The New York Times.

Among the remarkable pieces Kudelka has added to the company's repertoire are "In Paradisum," considered the troupe's masterpiece. Scheduled for performance at the Center, "In Paradisum" is a moving and compelling work focusing on the transition between life and death. The quotation "Into paradise may the angels lead thee" provides the dance's inspiration.

The program also will include a new Kudelka work, "Misfits," choreographed to Prokofiev's Violin Concerto and Nacho Duato's "Na Floresta" (In the Forest), a folklore-inspired mood piece about man and nature, described as "a romp in the rain forest," and danced by five men and five women.

A one-hour version of the Les Grands program will be presented today at 11:30 a.m.

Tickets for Les Grands Ballets Canadiens are $17.50 for orchestra or grand tier seating; $9.50 for balcony seats. Student performance tickets are $4.

For reservations and additional information, contact the Center's ticket service at 584-7777 or 1-800-238-7777.

Movie focuses on dreams for images

By D. R. WILLIAMS
Staff Critic

"Akira Kurosawa's Dreams" makes a strong argument for and against the use of dreams as cinematic inspiration.

Getting that critical statement out of my system, I can save the reader from pondering a detailed dissection of a film that's not made to be cut apart, since it's already intentionally fractured.

The best approach is to comment on Kurosawa's motives as they appear in the film. When dreams inspire a filmmaker to create, the trick is to be able to translate the irrational actions and visions of the dream into a rational verbal and visual language.

Many films stage their dreams as excuses for excessive images and hyperactive camera work, but rarely do dreams occur that way. Dreams are a variation of ordinary life, so they tend to appear ordinary, when actually they are left of center. Things that seem weird in reality are accepted as commonplace in dreams.

Kurosawa exploits that idea to the fullest in the eight film shorts that represent eight dreams from each decade in his life. At 80, Kurosawa is still a master of bringing the most out of actors and particularly, many actors. The scenes that have crowds engaged in panic or ritual never seem cluttered or confused. He maintains focus by presenting himself — as a child, a young man and a man in his prime — in his dreams.

Perhaps a criticism of the film would be of the motive for making it. Certainly, these dreams made an impression on Kurosawa and at his age, he felt it was time to visualize them.

But five years ago, Kurosawa made a film that seemed to be the perfect swan song. This movie, "Ran," was an experience in human emotion taken to incredible extremes.

Except dreams. But dreams are so personal sometimes that they make a little impression on the viewer, except the obvious visual excellence or equally obvious meaning of each dream.

We experience what Kurosawa experienced, but it's not the same because it didn't come from our lives.

"Akira Kurosawa's Dreams" is a docudrama about Kurosawa's mind. As a swan song, it's a collection of visually varied fragments that could never be films by themselves.

But maybe this isn't his last film. I certainly hope not.

"Akira Kurosawa's Dreams" is showing at Loews in Fayette Mall on Nicholasville Rd.

Many Americans have identified Saddam with Adolf Hitler and believe him to be popular with all Arab nations. But Dekmejian said Saddam's personality is closer to that of Joseph Stalin, and that he is only popular with the Iraqis.
The reason for his lack of popularity outside his own country is because he lacks charisma, and the popularity he does enjoy is due to the support of Palestinians. Unlike Hitler, "he forgets about idealism, in fact he changes ideals regularly.

He is very much a pragmatist," Dekmejian said.
He has made some military mistakes, including attacking Iran during its inner turmoil in 1987. That country used its religious zeal to almost defeat Saddam.
But war is not inevitable, Dekmejian said. If Saddam understands the reality that the United States is coming directly after him and his regime, he will "back down if given something."
This "something" would include American promises to deal with the Palestinian issue, which many think President Bush has avoided; a promise by Bush to get involved in the negotiations; and a promise by Kuwait to negotiate about trading access to the Persian Gulf.

UK graduate, agreed with Stampf, writing that "your letter writing has a profound effect on morale."
Jay Fischlein, an accounting senior participating in the program, said he thinks the program sent not only a message of support to the military personnel but toward U.S. intervention as a whole.

"The (letter-writing) campaign reflects the general attitudes of people — I think most agree with the intervention," he said.
But Tonya Johnson, a resident adviser at Patterson and a psychology junior, said she believes the focus of the program should be to support the service people, not to make political statements.
"We are the reason they're there," she said. "If we don't support them, they don't have a purpose."
Some students sent sports scores, horoscopes and comic strips — anything that the soldiers might miss.

Adjusting to the 100-degree-plus temperatures is one concern expressed, especially with the misery of frequent sandstorms.
"It (sand) gets in everything you own, and you're always covered in dust. I can't wait to see grass," Pete Vanderbilt wrote. "You have to forget where you come from and all the luxuries you had and just go from day to day. Others look at the experience as an adventure and enjoy the beauty of the foreign land."
Back at UK, students still support green ribbons and a determination to keep the lines of communication open between themselves and Saudi Arabia.

Whorey said she has found something she has in common with U.S. service personnel, and will keep writing to the soldiers in Saudi Arabia because she knows how she feels when she doesn't get mail from home.
And as she carefully tucks the letter into a desk drawer, a green reminder dangles from her wrist.

Your Resume, I Presume?

A resume can make or break your chances at getting a job

By Kerry Karpesky-Ryan

Writing a good resume is a tricky thing. So tricky, in fact, that good resume writing is a business...

I have to wonder if there is enough market to bear their trade; after all, how many unemployed people have an extra 50 bucks lying around to spend on having their resumes professionally done?

Now it doesn't take too long even for someone as dense as myself to figure out that prospective employers do take this resume business pretty seriously.

Whether you're applying for a penny-ante, part-time pizza parlor job or a spot on the board of directors...

Your resume precedes you. It is your calling card.

The most frightening aspect of job-hunting is knowing that your qualifications pale when compared to all those MBA's, MBS's, PhD's, etc., etc., that saturate the worthwhile areas of the job market.

Of course, after some research, I wrote mine myself. By research, I mean that I studied a few belonging to other people.

Anyway, what I discovered by studying a variety of them was the fact that there exists a standard formula for how to properly compile a resume.

First, always put your name, address and telephone number on it.

If you're living out of your car, use the number of a convenient payphone where you can hang out all day.

You can also use the address of a nearby home or apartment. Meet the mail carrier at the box every day and pretty soon he or she will know your face so all the what they'll hand you all the mail without hesitation.

Only keep mail addressed to you, because you don't want to run a good thing into the ground.

"Career Objective." I've found that most employers are tired of the same old line like "To Pursue a Career in International Technological Communications."

Something like "To Pay My Bills and Still Have Enough to Eat" has a truer ring to it.

The third category is education.

Considering that most employers are men, for publications list your favorite issues of Sports Illustrated's swimsuit editions.

Now your resume is ready. I'm sure there's some fast-food manager just waiting for someone with your qualifications to walk in.

mother is not considered exuberant because most any man will blow smoke for her kid in a pinch.

Now comes the really tricky part - experience. If all else fails, consider hoodwinking. It never hurts to hedge your bets.

To round out your professional resume, choose one, two or all of the following: awards, achievements or publications.

Under "awards," mine were: Knot Tying Champion, Boy Scout Troop No. 465; Little League MVP; Raleigh (N.C.) Bandist, 1969.

For achievements, I just mentioned the fact that I had survived natural childbirth as a support person and the Reagan administration in the same year.

Considering that most employers are men, for publications list your favorite issues of Sports Illustrated's swimsuit editions.

Biafra's fiery talk just - what campus needed

By Alan Creech

Once again nationalism rears its ugly head. The type that leads us blindly, faithfully and patriotically into the mouths of awaiting monsters. Nationalism that does not dare let us ask questions of motivation or reason.

Do these echoes of faith come from the Reserve Office Training Corps, outraged young Republicans or the halls of the American Legion?

No, they come from the foghorn of this flagship university. It seems that UK President Charles Wehington and Chancellor for the Lexington Campus Robert Hemeway have stated a mandate opinion for all of us here at UK.

In response to Jello Biafra's burning of an American flag on campus last month, Wehington said: "We want it known that UK neither approves nor condones (flag burning)."

I and many others support Biafra's right to express his opinions of the U.S. government, even if that includes burning the U.S. flag as his medium.

Universities should be centers of thoughts and ideas; a place where we learn about cultural diversity and tolerance.

While Wehington is "disappointed and displeased," he need not include those of us that support Biafra's attitude in his public condemnation while speaking as a UK official. The opinions of administration are not the opinions of the campus at large.

Another example of unquestioning patriotic stupidity were Hemeway's remarks in the Oct. 26 Kernel. (Unquestioning patriotic stupidity is the generally accepted norm and not a personal fault of Hemeway.)

Hopefully, the boring Fawn Hall-Tip O'Neill lecture drags will be replaced by more speakers of Biafra's magnitude.

For all of us at UK, let's hope that the administration does not try to prevent SAB from having speakers that are just as good as Biafra in the future.

Alan Creech is a political science senior and president of Socially Concerned Students.

some kind of way to attempt to confuse his reads and then you've got to play great football," Curry said. "We have to play beyond ourselves to win this game."

The Gators also have a talented backfield in tailback Errict Rhett and fullback Willie McClendon. The duo combines to average more than five yards per carry.

Rhett is the Gators' leading rusher with 677 yards on the season. He is averaging 5.8 yards per carry and 75.2 yards a game. McClendon has scored seven touchdowns and is averaging 4.6 yards a carry.

Although Florida has posted some lofty numbers, the Cats have a positive outlook going into Commonwealth Stadium tomorrow.

"I feel confident with the defensive scheme that we have, we can stop both of them (Florida's running and passing game)," rover Larry Jackson said. "The team has the attitude that we can beat anybody if we can execute and play 60 minutes of Kentucky football like we are capable of doing."

Defensively, Florida is even more impressive, ranking No. 2 nationally. It is especially effective against the run, allowing only 85.1 yards a game.

Curry compared Florida's defense to a stone wall.

"Get the picture of a stone wall and people running into it and bouncing off," Curry said. "That's how it looks when Florida plays defense against the run."

Curry plans to continue with his strategy of running the football, which has highlighted the running of tailback Al Baker. Baker will be shooting for his fourth straight 100-yard game. The Cats, with the help of freshman fullback Terry Samuels, have had three consecutive 200-plus rushing games.

That streak will be rendered vulnerable by the Gators.

At halftime of tomorrow's game, the 1951 UK Sugar Bowl championship team that defeated Oklahoma 13-7 will be saluted. Kickoff is at 12:40 p.m.

THE GOOD. THE BAD. THE EXTREME.

They've devastated the U.K. with a maniacal SRO tour. Now, the West Coast's most radical hard-rock band is knocking America on its ass, touring with AC/DC.

"Blackout In The Red Room." Featuring the new track and video

Why Do You Think They Call It Dope?

On the air, in your face, over the top. Miss 'em now and you're really missing out.

LOVE/HATE. "BLACKOUT IN THE RED ROOM."
