THE THIRD REPORT ON THE ANNUAL ALUMNI ROLL CALL for 1956-57 shows an increase in the second report made October 12, 1956, of 779 new members and $6,404.75. The grand total to date as shown above is now 3,227 members contributing a total of $22,694.25. The largest single gift for this period was $1,000.00 contributed by an associate member from Jefferson County, which will be placed in the Alumni Building Fund.

The 1956-57 gift memberships to last year's graduating seniors and life memberships have not been included in these figures. The final tabulation, to be published in May, will include all memberships.

MY SINCERE THANKS to you alumni who have supported the U.K. Alumni Fund for 1956-57 by your contributions and to those of you who worked in one of our local membership campaigns. This successful solicitation on the part of our loyal alumni has meant success for the Alumni Fund in 1956-57 as opposed to our failure. With your continued interest and support we can do more and we will.

Yours for a greater University of Kentucky.

THE PICTURE CHANGES

Deep in the hearts of most alumni of the University is a feeling of intense pride in the institution and a desire to be of service, tempered perhaps by limitations of time, money and, in many instances, great distance.

However, as the University has expanded and grown, has achieved distinction and recognition, has, in fact, come of age, this feeling has begun to be translated into action by a few very loyal and devoted alumni and friends.

This fact is evidenced in a story which appears on this page of this issue of the KENTUCKY ALUMNUS, which reports the fact that three gifts of considerable significance have just been received by the Alumni Association.

These gifts—one from an alumnus, one from the bereaved Mother of an alumnus and one from a friend—indicate that the alumni are thinking in terms of repaying alma mater for her contribution to their successful careers, and that the citizens of Kentucky are becoming increasingly conscious of the contribution the University is making to the commonwealth and, in turn, are trying to carry some part of the financial load.

These gifts are significant; not only in the amounts designated but in the example they set. We hope that they are the beginning of many such fine gestures, and that alumni everywhere will review these gifts in terms of their own ability to make similar contributions.

Alumni Ass'n Obtains Three Sizeable Gifts For U. of K.

The University of Kentucky Alumni Association has been the agency through which three gifts, two for scholarships and one for unrestricted purposes, have been reported recently.

The first, a full, perpetual scholarship from an alumnus who prefers to remain anonymous, is set up as part of his will, and will come to the Alumni Association upon the death of the alumnus and his wife.

The second is a contribution of $5,000 to the University, through the Alumni Association, from Mrs. Virginia K. Beasley of Lexington, mother of the late Lieut. Virgil K. Beasley, law school graduate who lost his life in World War II. Interest from Mrs. Beasley's contributions will be used, according to her stipulation, to set up a Law School scholarship in memory of her son.

The third gift was $1,000 from a friend of the University living in Louisville, and came to the Alumni Association with no restrictions at-

Alice Tramell

Peggy O'Neill

Two former University of Kentucky students are now flight stewardesses with Delta Air Lines.

Miss Alice Ann Tramell, of Jellison, graduated last year. She was active in intramural sports, a member of the League of Women Voters, and secretary of the Political Club.

Miss Peggy O'Neill, of Lexington, attended the University for one year in the college of arts and sciences.

Miss Tramell is based in Houston and Miss O'Neill in Memphis.

EXECUTIVE JOB GOES TO UK ALUM

John Potter, '35, of Owensboro, has been appointed manager of community relations for Texas Gas Transmission Corp. He assumed his new duties January 1.

Formerly supervisor of publications for Texas Gas, Mr. Potter will coordinate the company's activities and press relations in the areas adjacent to its pipeline system. He will also continue as editor of the Texas Gas employee magazine, The Line Walker.

While a student at UK Mr. Potter was associate editor of the Kentucky Kernel and is a member of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalists' fraternity.

He has been an employee of Texas Gas since 1952. Prior to that time he was employed by the Owensboro Messenger and Inquirer as city editor and news editor.

attached. The sum was placed in the Alumni-Faculty House Fund, along with the $15,000 contributed last year for that purpose by Alumnus-Publisher James W. Carnahan of Chicago.

'Alumnus of Year' Award Given Baker

Homer L. Baker, immediate past president of the University of Kentucky Alumni Association, was honored as UK's "outstanding alumnus of the year" during halftime ceremonies of the Kentucky-Vanderbilt homecoming football game, last November 10.

The award was made by Alma Magna Mater, a loyalty group made up of students whose parents or grandparents attended the University. Basis of the annual award is "outstanding and unselfish service to the University."

Baker is general sales manager of the Louisville Cement Co. He has served as a member of the executive committee of the UK Alumni Association, and is active in the Jefferson County Alumni Association. This year's recipient has two sons who are UK graduates.

The award, a silver tray, was presented by Richard Vimont, Lexington, president of Alma Magna Mater. Assisting him was Carolyn Collier, Lexington vice president of the group.

UK SEEKS PARK AREA AS SITE FOR CENTER

University of Kentucky trustees have approved filing of condemnation proceedings to acquire 44 acres of Devou Park in Covington as the site of UK's Northern Center. The center, which has 700 students, has been housed in a Covington school which soon will be needed for public-school purposes.

The plot of land which the University hopes to acquire at a nominal cost consists of three plateaus located about a mile from the present site. Efforts to find suitable quarters in downtown Covington have been abandoned because of the cost of remodeling existing buildings. The State Attorney General's office previously has recommended that condemnation action would be in order, and the State Department of Finance has approved acquisition of the property as "essential to the long-range service of the Commonwealth."

Barkley Papers Deposited At UK

An insight into the illustrious career of the late Alben W. Barkley — Vice President of the United States and U.S. Representative and Senator from Kentucky — may be gained from the "Veep's" collection of personal papers and effects now on deposit at the University of Kentucky.

A superficial examination of the extensive collection reveals that the some 100 boxes contain Mr. Barkley's public and private papers from 1940 to his death last April 30. Much of the material is expected to be intimate records and personal views of the American political picture during this period.

A key to the extensiveness of the political scene can be found in the numerous cartoons assembled by Mr. Barkley. Also included in the Barkley collection are his files, the gavels used as presiding officer of the Senate, canes he collected as a hobby, pictures, medals, flags and the Vice President's chair. On the back of the chair is the following inscription:

"Vice President . . . from Kentucky Democratic members of the House, Jan. 20, 1949 . . . Presented to Alben W. Barkley as a token of affection and in recognition of long and outstanding service to Kentucky, to the nation and to humanity."

Dr. Herman L. Donovan, while UK president, first contacted Mr. Barkley regarding his personal and private papers, and Dr. Bennett H. Wall, University associate professor of history, followed up the initial contact with frequent visits with Mr. Barkley in Washington and Paducah. After Mr. Barkley's death, Dr. Wall received permission from the Barkley family to deposit the collection at UK.

Various portions of the collection will be exhibited in the Barkley Room, which will be established in the Margaret I. King Library. Dedication of the room has been tentatively set for this spring.

Past Presidents, '07 To Be Cited

The year 1957 will be a banner reunion year at the University of Kentucky, with 15 classes scheduled to come back in May, headed by the indomitable class of 1907, the class with the finest percentage of returnees at each of its past reunions.

Saturday, May 25 has been designated Alumni Day, and will open the commencement week-end program. Registration for all returning alumni will be held Saturday morning from 10 a.m. to 12 noon in the Music Room of the Student Union, to be followed by the general luncheon for all alumni and the annual meeting of the general Alumni Association.

President and Mrs. Frank G. Dickey will be at home to alumni, seniors, their families, faculty, staff and friends of the University that afternoon at a reception at Maxwell Place, to be followed by the annual alumni banquet in the ballroom of the Student Union.

Feature of the banquet will be presentation of certificates to all living past presidents of the UK Alumni Association.

Classes scheduled for special reunions are: 1907 and 1932; and regular reunions are being planned for 1886 and 1897; 1913, '14, '15, and '16; 1933, '34 and '35, and 1951, '52, '53, and '54.

Baccalaureate services will be held Sunday afternoon, May 26 at the Memorial Coliseum, and commencement is scheduled for Monday morning, May 27, also in the Coliseum.

Members of the 1907 class will receive their Golden Jubilee certificates from the commencement platform. They are also planning a class dinner for Friday night, May 24.

Dr. John H. Prewitt, '31, of Lexington, has been elected vice president of Lexington's Central Baptist Hospital medical staff.

Astor Hogg, '24, of Harlan, has been named chief legal officer for the State Department of Highways.

New Medical Dean Discusses The Need For Private Funds

W. H. Skinner Named Head of Foundation

Dr. William R. Willard, vice president of the University's proposed Medical Center and dean of the College of Medicine, reviewed the progress made to date in the planning of the center and outlined the needs and possible uses for private funds at the annual meeting of the Kentucky Medical Foundation held last December at the University.

"Private funds can serve a vital need in the development and operation of the College of Medicine at the University of Kentucky," said Dean Willard, and, "in addition, there is an opportunity for donors to receive great satisfaction in rendering vital service in the advancement of knowledge and in helping people. There is also an opportunity to memorialize a member of a family or a distinguished citizen."

Doctor Willard said that the need for funds falls into four categories:

(1) To enrich the teaching and research programs; (2) To assist students and faculty with some of their economic problems; (3) To assist in the planning, development, and administration of the Medical Center; and (4) To provide or expand essential facilities.

William H. Skinner, '25, of Lexington, vice president of the Kentucky Utilities Company, was named president of the Kentucky Medical Foundation at the annual meeting. J. Founders Day, Feb. 22, To Honor Librarians

Margaret King, D.H. Clift, To Be Cited

A half century of library service on the University of Kentucky campus and about 1,500 years of Kentucky librarianship will pass in review Feb. 22 at the UK Founders Day program in Memorial Hall.

The exercise, scheduled for 8 p.m., will be devoted to the University Library in particular, and to Kentucky librarians in general.

UK's first library was founded 50 years ago by a generous multi-millionaire from Pittsburgh who had benefited from a public library as a youth. This man, Andrew Carnegie, began a great academic library tradition in Lexington with the establishment of the Carnegie library building.

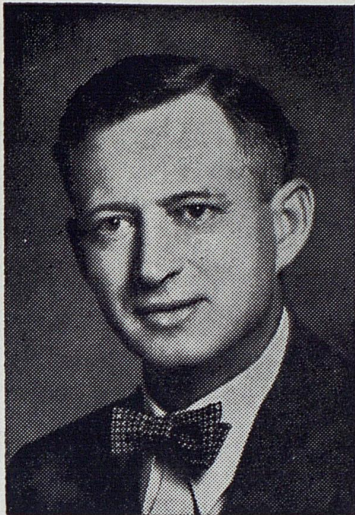

Today, he would be proud to see that the library he started (now called the Margaret I. King Library after the first librarian) ranks with those of Duke, Virginia and North Carolina as among the largest in the Southeast.

The principal Founders Day address will be delivered by David H. Clift, '30, executive secretary of the American Library Association in Chicago, who is one of the most prominent alumni of the University in the library profession. He will speak on the future of libraries in Kentucky, and their role in an intellectual renaissance of the Commonwealth.

In addition, Dr. William S. Webb, '01, distinguished professor of physics, will give a brief sketch of the early days of the UK library.

Special recognition certificates will be given 47 Kentucky librarians who have served for 29 years or more in the profession. Plaques will be awarded Clift and Miss Margaret I. King, '98, UK librarian from 1909 to 1948 when she retired.

The University library's main foyer will contain an exhibit portraying the rise and growth of the campus libraries during the past 50 years. Of interest is the fact that of the 49 distinguished American research libraries making up the membership of the Association of Research Libraries, UK and the University of California have grown more rapidly and developed the greatest quality of collections during the 20th century.

Kentucky librarians to be honored are:

Mrs. John Dougherty, Berea College Library; Miss Margie Helm, Western State Teachers College; Miss Frances Watts, State Library Commission; Miss Ellen Beal Thomas, Georgetown Garth High School; Miss Frances Cook, Midway Junior College; Mrs. Mary T. Gilbert, Owensboro High School; Miss Harriett Boswell, Paducah Public Library; Miss Fay Champion, Paducah Junior College; Miss Bessie Boughton, Miss Grace Snodgrass, Mrs. Ellen Stutsman, Miss Artie Lee Taylor and Miss Margaret Tuttle, all of the University of Kentucky.

Miss Evelyn Schneider, and Miss Margaret Lavin, both of the University of Louisville; Sister Mary Canisius, Nazareth College (Louisville); Sister Mary Christina, Ursuline College (Louisville); Miss Ella Warren, Louisville High Schools; Miss May Dearing, Louisville High Schools.

Mrs. Susan R. Ackridge, Miss Clara Behrens, Miss Clara Biles, Mrs. Emily Bowditch, Miss Patricia Burrell, Miss Catherine Bush, Mrs. Vivian Crowell, Miss Annette Crutcher, Mrs. Sarah

Diefenback, Miss Mary Foley, Miss Nell Fowler, Miss Margaret E. Gilligan, Miss Edna Grauman, Miss Edith Hancock, Miss Ellen Harding, Miss Laura Jefferis, Miss Florinne Kammerer, Miss Amy C. Lutes, Miss Garnett Masden, Mrs. Edna Miller, Mrs. Nelle Lee Miller, Miss Frances Rademaker, Miss Alma St. Clair, Miss Leone M. Smith, Mrs. May Alyce Stinger, Mrs. Marion Stoner, Miss Marguerite T. Terrell and Miss Ethel Crawford, all of the Louisville Public Library.

In the Margaret I. King Library's main foyer there will be an exhibit portraying the rise and growth of the University Libraries during the past half century. It is of some interest to note that of the forty-nine distinguished American research libraries which are members of the Association of Research Libraries, the University of Kentucky and the University of California have grown most rapidly and developed the greatest quality of collections during the twentieth century.

Visitors to the University on 22 February—and on any other day, for that matter—are cordially invited to visit the Margaret I. King Library and the departmental and collegiate libraries throughout the campus. Everywhere crowded conditions will be observed, but nothing is more gratifying to the University's Faculty than to see the libraries crowded to overflowing with readers and books.

Friends of the University and the Library who cannot attend the exercises on 22 February may be interested in receiving more information about the Library and its services. A Library Guide as well as other printed literature concerning library service in Lexington is available to anyone who writes for it.

L. G. "Floppy" Forquer of Bourbon county, former Wildcat football captain, has been named by Gov. A. B. Chandler as associate commissioner of the state's Department of Economic Security.

Dean Describes New Pharmacy Building

By EARL P. SLONE, Dean
College of Pharmacy

The new building of the College of Pharmacy on the campus in Lexington is being built on a site of about an acre, and is expected to be completed and ready for use by September 1957. The building faces on Washington Street and extends in a westerly direction from Gladstone Avenue. The lot runs through from Washington to Graham and lies west of the men's quadrangle. It is almost across the street from the agricultural experiment station. It will have its own parking area and a drug garden at the rear of the building. The building itself is in the form of a simple rectangle and in its main part will measure about 60x160 feet. Its over-all dimensions will be 70x175 feet. It is three stories in height, with no basement. It will have a central corridor with the classroom laboratories with north light about 30 ft. in width and varying in length according to its use. On the south side of the corridor, offices and laboratories of 16 feet in width and varying lengths will be provided. A lecture room is provided on each of the three floors.

The building is of reinforced concrete with aluminum windows, insulated metal panels and gray brick. The building is equipped with a freight elevator. The first floor contains the general offices and the offices and laboratories of the pharmacy department. The second floor provides quarters for the materia medica department and the central store room and the third floor is taken over with pharmaceutical chemistry. Temperature and humidity control is provided in the balance room, the instrument room and the animal room. A separate room is provided for the chemistry department for the water still, ovens, furnaces, and other processes using heat. This room is provided with an exhaust so that heat vapors and fumes are not distributed throughout the laboratories. Heat and steam are furnished off the campus lines from the University's central heat and power plant. The latest safety features are provided to make this building as fire resistant as possible. Electrical heating is used wherever possible in order to reduce the likelihood of explosion from open flame. Another of the unique features is that the laboratory wastes and sanitary wastes are in separate systems and the laboratory wastes are of pyrex glass. The laboratory equipment on the pharmaceutical chemistry floor will be metal, while that on the first and second floors will be of wood. The only fixed walls are the corridor walls. All partitions being put up are of light aggregate block, which can be taken down and erected with ease and speed.

The building is designed so that it can be added to at its western end. The building sets back about 60 feet from the curb and, if anything, the rear will be more attractive than the front. Every effort is being made to conserve the many fine trees at the site. It is contemplated that a greenhouse and volatile storage shed will be separate from the building. If additional money can be obtained, a manufacturing laboratory will be provided as a separate building or in addition to the proposed one.

Franklin P. Williams, president and general manager of the S. S. Kresge Co., and an alumnus of the University of Kentucky was the subject of a feature story which appeared recently in the Cincinnati Times Star.

A former resident of Cincinnati, Williams was in that city to look over the new Kresge store opened in South Center, a Cincinnati suburban shopping center, when interviewed by Jerry Hurter, the Times Star's executive city editor.

While a resident of Cincinnati for four years Mr. Williams lived in Hill Park when he was district superintendent of Kresge stores.

Mr. Williams is a native of Frankfort, Ky., and attended the University of Kentucky. His first job with Kresge was in the stockroom in Louisville, 1915, when he was 21. He was promoted to manage stores in Burlington, Iowa, and Bloomington, Ill., before going to Cincinnati in 1921 as district superintendent. He returned to Louisville as manager of the store there in 1928 and five years later became manager of the downtown Chicago store. Later, he managed the company's largest store in Detroit.

In 1948 he was made a board member and vice president in charge of merchandising. He became president and general manager in 1953.

Mr. Gish is a 1947 graduate of UK, and Mrs. Gish obtained her degree in 1950. They both have had experience in the newspaper field.

Twice Pulitzer Prize-Winner Don Whitehead Authors "The FBI Story"

By HELEN G. KING

Don Whitehead, of Washington, D. C., chief of the New York Herald Tribune's Washington Bureau, former Associated Press correspondent and twice winner of the Pulitzer Prize for reporting, is the author of "The FBI Story" which has just come from the press.

Dr. Whitehead is an alumnus of the University of Kentucky and holds the honorary Doctor of Letters degree from his Alma Mater. His distinguished career as a correspondent for the Associated Press in war and in peace has won accolades from fellow-correspondents pre-eminent among them being the late Ernie Pyle.

The thwarting of war-time intrigues by the FBI as well as the organization's 50-year war against the underworld and the behind-the-scene war of the FBI with the Communist conspiracy in 1936 are detailed in the book.

Mr. Whitehead, through access to closely guarded FBI files has added an important footnote to the history of a violent era and has done it in true Whitehead style—with factual evidence which is direct, accurate and vibrant.

Of the many honors which have come to Mr. Whitehead during his career, the distinction of having been chosen by J. Edgar Hoover to write this factual story tops the list. It gives evidence not only of confidence in his ability as the top man in his field, but also indicates an unspoken faith in his integrity and loyalty.

The University of Kentucky and her School of Journalism take great pride in this native son and alumnus.

Col. Morat Heads U. of Pa. Air ROTC

Lieutenant Colonel Charles D. Morat, USAF, a pilot who flew in World War II and the Korean action, has been named professor of air science and head of the Air Force ROTC program at the University of Pennsylvania, the University has announced.

Colonel Morat, who was assigned to the University by the Air Force last year as an assistant professor, succeeds Colonel Marvin J. McKinney, USAF, who has retired.

The University's Air Force ROTC this year has what Colonel Morat called a "highly select group" of about 150 cadets, most of whom have indicated a desire to take flight training upon graduation.

"Under Air Force policy, screening of freshmen applicants has been further tightened this year," Colonel Morat said. "A physical examination previously given at the sophomore level is now administered to freshmen during their first week of school."

"The aim is to limit enrollment almost entirely to students who are likely to be mentally and physically qualified for ultimate duty as both flying and staff officers."

Colonel Morat, a native of Louisville, Ky., was commissioned in the Army in 1938 upon his graduation from the University of Kentucky, where he was an ROTC infantry cadet. He became a pilot in 1942.

Besides serving in the South Pacific during World War II and in Korea during the hostilities there, he has

May Duncan Honored For Service To Ky.

Mrs. May K. Duncan, who has been associated with elementary education in the University of Kentucky's College of Education for 31 years, was honored recently for her "long and valuable service to the University and to education in Kentucky."

Dr. Lyman V. Ginger, dean of the University College of Education, presented Mrs. Duncan with a gift of luggage on behalf of the education faculty. The presentation was made during a banquet in her honor.

Mrs. Duncan, a native of Nicholasville, was given a change-of-work status last September. She joined the University staff in 1925 as instructor in education and later was elevated to assistant professor and associate professor. In 1942 she was made a full professor. During her early years at UK, Mrs. Duncan offered the first courses in elementary education for experienced teachers.

The educator is credited with establishing the University elementary school in 1930 and she served as principal until 1936. Mrs. Duncan also organized the Department of Elementary Education, later a division, in 1936, and served as head of that department until last September.

Before coming to UK, Mrs. Duncan taught at Nicholasville, Louisville, Eastern Kentucky State College, and State Teachers College in Bloomsburg, Pa. She holds the bachelor of arts degree from the University and the M.A. degree from Columbia University.

Mrs. Duncan was the first woman in the southern states to receive a fellowship from the General Education Board to Columbia University. She belongs to numerous professional organizations.

seen extensive duty as a test pilot and in administrative assignments. He holds the Air Medal, the Bronze Star and a commendation ribbon, and has the rating of senior pilot.

Arts And Sciences Holds 1st. Annual Exposition On Campus

The University's College of Arts and Sciences held its first annual Exposition for high school students, parents and teachers on the campus last December 7 and 8.

All 29 departments of the College held special displays and demonstrations for the visitors. In the past several years the several divisions of the College have staged open house for high school students on different dates. This year, the departments coordinated their activities in order to allow students and their parents to visit more classrooms and laboratories during their stay.

Dean M. M. White of the College of Arts and Sciences said that "the various displays were designed especially for those students in grades 10, 11 and 12." "Workshops and other special programs were conducted for parents, principals and teachers."

Conferences with members of the University faculty were arranged for high school students planning to enter college. Included were career counseling and college registration information.

Tours of art, music, drama, library and printing facilities were conducted during the two-day period and the department of music offered auditions and tests in music for students who plan to apply for music scholarships.

Social periods, intramural contests and special entertainment were features of the two-day event.

Dr. George Reddish Receives Chemical Achievement Award

Dr. George F. Reddish, of St. Louis, Mo., a graduate of the University of Kentucky in 1919 with a B.S. degree in Agriculture, received the 1956 Achievement Award of the Chemical Manufacturers' Association, last December.

The award was for outstanding work in the fields of public health, disinfection and antiseptics.

Dr. Reddish, a native of Somerset, Ky., and a former resident of Lexington, received the award at a luncheon meeting in connection with the trade association's 43rd annual meeting in Washington, D. C.

Lauding him as one of the nation's pioneering bacteriologists, both in government service and industry, the president of the association noted that the award was made in recognition of Dr. Reddish's "many accomplishments in promoting public health through more effective means of fighting the germs of disease."

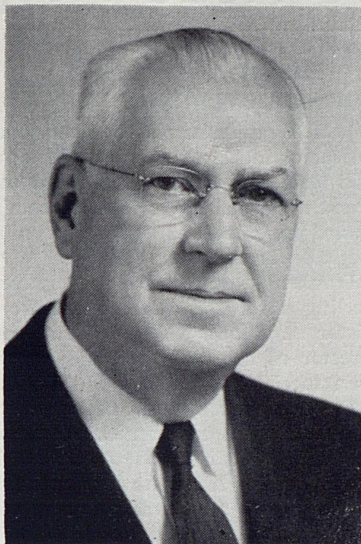

The St. Louis scientist, who is chief bacteriologist of the Lambert-Hudnut division of Warner-Lambert Pharmaceutical Company, has made "signal contributions to the theoretical as well as the practical aspects of public health, disinfection, and antiseptics" during more than 30 years of service, the association's awarded plaque stated, adding:

"Among other scientific achievements Dr. Reddish developed methods of determining the effectiveness of disinfectants and antiseptics which became guiding standards for their evaluation."

Dr. Reddish obtained his Doctor of Philosophy degree from Yale University in 1922.

After serving as associate professor of bacteriology at the Medical College of Virginia, he joined the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in 1924 as an associate bacteriologist in charge of research and control of antiseptics and disinfectants. He was instrumental in developing F.D.A. standard methods of testing these types of products.

In 1927 he left Government service to act as chief research bacteriologist for a Baltimore drug firm but returned to F.D.A. the following year. He again left Federal service in 1929 to join another pharmaceutical company as director of bacteriological research, a post he held until 1955.

He has also served as professor of microbiology at St. Louis College of Pharmacy and Allied Sciences from which, in 1950, he received an honorary Doctor of Science degree. He is the author of nearly 100 technical papers in his fields.

Dr. Reddish is a member of a University of Kentucky family, his brother, Dr. Dan Reddish, of Lexington; and his four nieces, Joan Carigan, Margaret Gooch Kiser, Betty Reddish Cloud and Jane Gooch Adams all being alumnae of UK.

The UK Board of Trustees has accepted a $1,208,992 grant from the federal government to be used to aid in the construction of a medical sciences building, the first unit of UK's Medical Center. Action on the grant was taken recently by the Surgeon General upon the recommendation of the National Advisory Council of the Health Research Facilities Act.

SOMERSET BOY WINS WHAS $1,000 GRANT

Donald David Dick, '53, formerly of Somerset, Ky., has been awarded the $1,000 WHAS radio scholarship grant made to the University by Mr. Barry Bingham, president of the station.

Dick will continue his writing education at the University under the scholarship established jointly by WHAS and the Alfred I. duPont Awards Foundation and underwritten by the $1,000 given the station as the duPont award winner last year.

Under terms of the scholarship, the University selected a student showing promise and ability in the field of communications, to do graduate specialized work in radio and television.

Dick's work has been published in several magazines. He currently works for WVLK in Lexington.

Richard Wittrup, a University of Chicago hospital administrator, in December was appointed by the University of Kentucky Board of Trustees as administrator of the planned University of Kentucky Hospital.

Wittrup, an administrative assistant at the University of Chicago Clinics and instructor in the Hospital Administration program of the School of Business, assumed his duties with UK Jan. 1.

Selection of Wittrup for the post was recommended by Dr. William Willard, dean of the UK College of Medicine and vice president of the Medical Center, who is directing planning for the University's $25,000 teaching and research center.

The administrator's chief assignment will be to assist in the planning and direct the operation of the University teaching hospital. He also will hold the rank of assistant professor of hospital administration.

Wittrup holds an A.B. degree in economics from the University of Missouri and a master's degree in business administration from the University of Chicago. Since 1951 he has been associated with the University of Chicago Clinics in various capacities.

In addition to his administrative and teaching duties, he has served since 1955 as assistant director of graduate program in hospital administration.

UK's new hospital administrator served on various civic committees since joining the University of Chicago staff. He was a member of a team engaged in consultation for the United States Public Health Service on the Marine hospital in Chicago.

Wittrup is married and is the father of two sons.

Young Presidential Family Moves Into Maxwell Place

Maxwell Place, home of two former presidents of the University of Kentucky and of the late Judge James H. Mulligan, Kentucky wit, poet, judge and statesman turned a fresh leaf in its historical manual last December 3, and opened its gracious doors to the fifth president of the University of Kentucky—Dr. Frank Graves Dickey and his family.

The youngest of the several distinguished masters of Maxwell Place, President Dickey, his lovely wife and their three children hope to carry on the many traditions of southern hospitality for which Maxwell Place has been noted since it was built by Dennis Mulligan in 1871 for his son James.

President Frank LeRond McVey was the first University president who occupied Maxwell Place, and his gracious and beloved wife Frances Jewell McVey carried on the traditional hospitality of the home. Then, with Dr. McVey's retirement in 1941 President Herman Lee Donovan and his charming lady came to occupy the spacious house and continued the long-established policy of host and hostess extraordinary.

President Donovan retired last spring, and this December saw the advent of another presidential family at Maxwell Place, which, according to custom, has been redecorated for the Dickey's.

Two large brass chandeliers from the old State Capitol have been installed in the house. The downstairs is decorated in colors of the rose-tone family, while the upstairs has been done in blue and harmonizing colors. A new electric kitchen also has been installed.

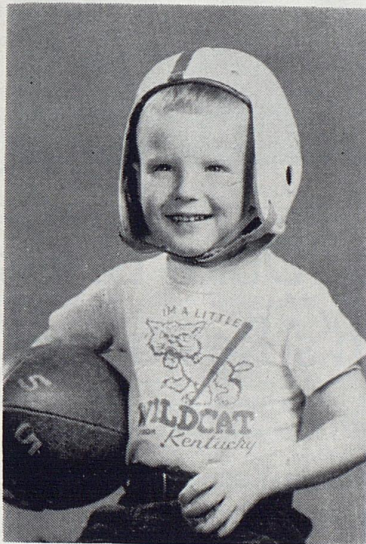

Fundamentally though, Maxwell Place is unchanged as it begins a new era, with a new master and mistress.

When President and Mrs. Donovan left they had a plaque placed at the front entrance, alongside the one which is inscribed with Henry Clay's famous statement: "No man calls himself a gentleman of Kentucky until he has first watered his horse at Maxwell Springs." The Donovan's parting tribute reads:

"We will remember always Maxwell Place—its spacious lawns; beautiful trees; lovely shrubs and its garden of vegetables and flowers but best of all we will remember the gracious friends, colleagues and neighbors who have come to see us while we have dwelt in this lovely old home; we will remember."

It is not difficult to believe that the rooms and corridors of Maxwell Place also will remember the Donovans.

John J. Larkin, Jr.

This little Wildcat from Kentucky lives in South Dakota, and is the son of Mary Nolan Pribble Larkin, alumna of UK and daughter of Emily Holloway Pribble and Captain Birkett Lee Pribble of Wildcat fame.

Alumni of the roaring twenties will remember Emily and Prib, and alumni of the forties will remember Mary Nolan. It is to be hoped that alumni of the seventies will remember John J. Larkin, Jr., whom Granddaddy Prib has started out on the right road.

Remember Kentucky in May?

Prof. Gillis, 90, Assigned New Task

Prof. Ezra L. Gillis, University of Kentucky registrar-emeritus, who has devoted 70 years to the advancement of education in Kentucky, celebrated his 90th birthday last January 1, and has been assigned the task of compiling little known information about former members of the UK faculty.

UK's beloved "grand old man" humorist, philosopher and fount of wisdom and knowledge, has spent 50 of his 70 years in education on the campus of the University of Kentucky, having joined the staff in 1907 as an instructor in the Normal Department. Prior to that Prof. Gillis taught 14 years in his native Anderson county and served five years as president of Minerva College near Maysville.

Three years after his arrival at the University he was given the title of registrar. During the 27 years he served in this capacity he became a nationally recognized authority on the professional work of college registrars. Among educators, he is credited with having done more than any other American in raising the professional standards of this office.

In 1937, when the University's change of work policy for faculty and staff members caused him to step down as registrar, Prof. Gillis refused to quit. At the age of 70 he founded the Bureau of Source Materials in Higher Education, and for the last 19 years has directed its operations.

Under his guidance, the bureau has collected voluminous files pertaining to the history of education in Kentucky, compiled date on early land-grant colleges and universities in the U.S., and prepared a county-by-county record of Kentuckians who lost their lives in World War II and the Korean War. Alumni of UK will recall the accurate listing of former University students which was published in post-war issues of the Kentucky Alumnus following both conflicts, and which Prof. Gillis had compiled and edited.

In 1950 Prof. Gillis was given the University's Sullivan Medallion, a presentation made annually to the Kentuckian selected by a panel of judges as the Commonwealth's outstanding citizen of the year.

The inscription read: "To President and Mrs. Eisenhower with hearty good wishes for the campaign and warm regards always—From the Republicans of the Blue Grass and the author—an 'Ike' Democrat."

Mr. Townsend is a past president of the UK Alumni Association and a member of the Alumni Executive Committee.

John R. McConnell, 68, also a UK alumnus, retired last November as president of American Air Filter. He has been vice president since 1958.

Kentucky's Nancy Duke Lewis Given New Dean's Residence

Nancy Duke Lewis, the University of Kentucky's distinguished young graduate who is dean of Pembroke College, has been given a new residence adjoining the campus.

There has been no residence for the dean near the campus for nearly 11 years, but recently the college purchased an official Dean's House, into which Miss Lewis has moved, following renovation and redecoration.

A story about the Dean of Pembroke and her house appeared in the November 4 issue of the Providence, R. I., Sunday Journal, and was forwarded to the Alumni Office by C. Robert Yeager of Attleboro, Mass., also a distinguished UK graduate, now vice president of L. G. Balfour Company.

The 10-room dwelling is a two and one-half story house with three bedrooms, one of which will be used for official overnight guests. A picture of the house, the Dean of Pembroke and

The report, presented to the President by Devereux C. Josephs, chairman of the Board of the New York Life Insurance Co. and chairman of the committee, outlines the problem and an approach to its solution, and opens with the statement that "the inescapable fact about the future of education beyond the high school is that in 1956 almost twice as many children will be born in the United States as were born in 1936." 1946 Graduate Serving As The Technical Director Of Guignol

UK's little theater is enjoying the services of Arch Rainey this year, 1946 graduate of UK from Ashland, Ky., with wide experience in theater and television, who assumed the title of technical director of Guignol at the beginning of the fall term in September.

In addition to handling the Guignol assignment, Mr. Rainey is directing the television section of UK's radio station WBKY.

In these capacities Rainey is designing and executing sets and property arrangements for both the theater and the Department of Radio Arts.

Lexington theatre-goers were given a sample of Rainey's abilities in the expansive set which he designed for "The Innocents," Guignol's final production last season.

He also built a realistic set of his own design for "The Corn Is Green," the first Guignol production of the year, scheduled for Nov. 6-10. Rainey is teaching a stagecraft class, and his students are assisting him in preparing this set.

The newcomer to the UK staff is already planning designs for "Othello," Guignol's early spring production.

Since his graduation from UK in 1946, Rainey has been engaged in various projects offering valuable experience in drama production. He served as stage manager for the Festival of Arts at the University of Iowa, and he also produced a weekly television show there.

The new Guignol technical director also has assisted in the production of exhibits at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City. He has been called on several times to plan sets for Station WHAS-TV.

After his graduation from UK, Rainey spent a season painting with an American group in Mexico, but his devotion to the theater called him back to school. Columbia University awarded him the M.A. in drama in 1951. He has now completed all his residence work toward the Ph.D.

Alum, Former Prof, Wins $1,000 Award

Dr. Philip R. Edwards, graduate of the University of Kentucky and former UK bacteriologist, was one of two scientists named last November as winners of the Fifth Kimble Methodology Award.

The $1,000 awards were presented at a Conference of State and Provincial Public Health Laboratory Directors, staged in conjunction with the American Public Health Association.

Dr. Edwards is a native of Owensboro and holds the B.S. degree from UK obtained in 1922, and the Ph.D. degree from Yale University. When he was graduated from UK he became the first graduate from this institution to be awarded the B.S. degree in bacteriology. During his junior and senior years he served as a laboratory assistant to Dr. Morris Scherago, head of UK's department of bacteriology.

After being awarded the Ph.D. by Yale, Dr. Edwards returned to UK as bacteriologist at the Agricultural Experiment Station. In February 1948 the UK Board of Trustees conferred upon him the title of "Distinguished Professor."

Dr. Edwards' citation commended him for outstanding work in "Methods for Identification of Enteric Bacteria."

The research foundation will administer the grant from the institute, an agency of the National Institute of Health, U. S. Department of Health, Education & Welfare. Confirmation of the grant came from the Public Health Service at Bethesda, Md.

Dr. Morris Scherago, professor and head of the UK Department of Bacteriology, will continue as director of the project. Dr. Herbert Hall, research associate in that department, is assistant director for the assignment.

Dr. Scherago has been associated with the University since 1919. In 1950 he was chosen by his colleagues in the UK College of Arts & Sciences as the Distinguished Professor of the Year.

Rupp's Raiders Surprise

Cats Third-Ranked After Tournaments

By KEN KUHN
Sports Publicity Director

A great many high honors have come to Kentucky's own Adolph Rupp over the past quarter of a century that he has guided the cage fortunes of the Wildcats and few people have the slightest doubt as to his ability to "make something out of virtually nothing," so to speak.

However, as the inimitable Baron of Basketball looked back over a hectic six weeks as his harried cagers neared the mid point of a difficult schedule, he must have privately reflected that any honor bestowed this season would most certainly be earned and should rank as one of his greatest coaching efforts.

To the well informed, the in-and-out Wildcats and their tremendously capable mentor were to be commended for their outstanding record of 10 wins against only two defeats (both by one point to teams ranking among the nation's top powers at the time) in face of obstacles that would have floored a less-determined combination.

The usually optimistic Rupp, himself, set the stage before the season opened for the drama that has developed to a point where he is a candidate for "Coach of the Year" honors and his team for some special title even if they fail to win the national championship or take the top spot in their own Southeastern Conference. When the first inquiries from national magazines regarding season prospects started hitting the desk even before the football season was underway, "Uncle" Adolph passed out the shocking word that "this team could possibly be our worst in 15 years."

Even after the Wildcats had flexed surprisingly strong muscles through the toughest December schedule any team ever tackled and came off with titles from their own Invitational and the Sugar Bowl Tournament, Coach Rupp stuck to his guns. He admitted the Wildcats had surprised and, if they kept up the pace, could make him a poorer prophet than the season of 1954 when he predicted no team playing a major schedule could go undefeated and then had to eat his words as his boys pranced through 25 games without a setback. But he defended his early fears about the team's potential by pointing out that at the time of his statement the outlook was far from bright. His untested charges were minus three tall and talented regulars (Bob Burrow, Jerry Bird and Phil Grawemeyer) lost via graduation and were further weakened by the loss of a key reserve (Phil Johnson) who likely would have been a starter at either center or forward if he had not become scholastically ineligible.

As if the loss of four good men, offset only by the import of the sensational Johnny Cox from the freshman team, were not enough to support an expression of pessimism, two more minor disasters were to rock the team's chances and make Rupp's job even more difficult. Just before the season opened the first week in December, senior forward Ray Mills collided in practice with a teammate and came off second best with a broken jaw that caused him to miss much early season action.

Next, less than 48 hours after the Kentuckians returned to Lexington from a triumph in the Sugar Bowl Tournament, All-America guard candidate Vernon Hatton underwent an emergency appendectomy. At this writing, Vernon is still in the hospital with eleven days behind him and approximately two weeks, at least, ahead of him before returning to the lineup. Coach Rupp was hoping to regain Hatton's services in time for the crucial scrap with Vanderbilt, chief contender standing in the path of a potential record of 17 SEC championships, at Nashville Jan. 26.

The loss of Hatton couldn't have come at a more crucial stage of the campaign. The Southeastern Conference schedule, which began a few days after his hospitalization, loomed as the toughest challenge ever to face the Wildcats. For the first time in many fans' memories, the Kentuckians, who have dominated the league almost every year since 1943, were not favored to cop the crown in '57. Instead, Vanderbilt was rated as the team to beat and both Tennessee and Auburn were considered serious threats.

Although they faced the prospect of engaging in league competition for at least two weeks and probably more with a makeshift lineup that certainly decreased their chances which had seemed bright before Hatton's illness, Kentucky could look back over their first 12 contests with pride in their accomplishment of a 10-2 record and third place ranking in the national polls.

The Wildcats showed surprising strength and depth as they opened the season by polishing off Washington and Lee, 94-66, and Miami (Fla.), 114-75. When they engaged highly-regarded Temple a week later in Philadelphia, the Ruppmen found the going a little rougher but managed to come out on top, 73-58, with the help of a tremendous second-half comeback and a 23-point contribution by Cox.

Seemingly improving with each game and on their way to great heights, the Wildcats returned home to face arch nemesis Eddie Hickey and company from St. Louis. What happened, they'd just as soon forget. The underdog Bilikens parlayed clever ball handling and tremendous shooting with a particularly bothersome defense to down the Cats by the slimest of margins, 71-70. It was only the fourth home court loss for UK since 1943.

Bouncing back on the stellar shoulders of the sensational Cox, who potted 34 vital points, the Big Blue humbled visiting Maryland, 76-55.

Then the roof fell in again, but it was not without the help of some strange circumstances. Playing at Duke in their second road trip of the season, Kentucky appeared to have the situation under control as they led by 15 points midway of the first half and by nine with 2:50 to go. However, the seemingly safe lead vanished before a determined Duke onslaught and the final outcome was another one point defeat, 85-84. Although the officiating, particularly one erroneous decision that cost the Wildcats a possible three points and gave the Blue Devils their chance to add two markers, was bad, it was not the complete story of Kentucky's downfall. They could only blame the disheartening loss on their own mistakes of inexperience.

The Duke "tragedy" must have impressed itself indelibly on the minds of the Ruppmen since they accomplished a major miracle in their next two starts. Even the most optimistic Kentucky follower hesitated to see a chance for their boys in the U.K. Invitational Tournament against a lineup of three of the nation's finest teams—Southern Methodist, Illinois and Dayton. But they achieved the impossible!

Paired against the undefeated SMU Mustangs, the fourth-ranked team in the Associated Press poll at the time and still fourth in the ratings as of this writing, in the opener, Kentucky turned in one of the best games ever seen on the Coliseum court to win, 73-67. The following night, it was Illinois' Big 10 kingpins on tap and everyone was certain that the Illini, like SMU undefeated and boasting fifth place in the national rankings, would measure the Wildcats. But ole Kaintuck accepted the challenge and almost ran Illinois out of the gym as they breezed to a 91-70 victory behind a sizzling display of basketball prowess.

A return to the Sugar Bowl came next and the tourney seemed made to order for the high-flying Ruppman with a trio of so-so ball clubs—Alabama, Houston and Virginia Tech—lined up in place of the original participants (Notre Dame, Dayton and St. Louis) who had withdrawn because of a racial controversy. But somebody forgot to tell lowly Virginia Tech that they weren't supposed to be in the same league with a team of Wildcats that had just disposed of two previously undefeated, nationally-ranked powerhouses. The result almost was disastrous as little Tech carried the fight right down to the wire before reserve Johnny Brewer intercepted a pass coming in from out of bounds and scored an easy basket with only eight seconds remaining to give the Cats a thrilling, 56-55 triumph. Thoroughly scared, the Kentuckians hopped on Houston the next night to cop a fourth Sugar Bowl title with a record-breaking, 111-76 victory.

Back home, with Hatton hospitalized for an appendix operation, a revamped lineup that saw Sugar Bowl hero Brewer at the vacated guard post blasted their first SEC opponent—Georgia Tech—to the tune of 95-72 and everyone breathed a little easier. Then, typical of the in and out season, they almost dropped a meaningless encounter two nights later against Loyola of Chicago. Although in trouble much of the way due to lack-lustre play and close officiating, Kentucky pulled away near the finish to post an 81-62 decision that brought their record to a surprisingly-successful, 10-2 for the season and kept them firmly entrenched in the third spot of the national polls.

What the immediate future held without Hatton, nobody would hazard a guess. Even Coach Rupp was hesitant to predict that his charges would

Alumni Association Honors Fifteen Seniors At Annual Football Banquet

Reserve Back Jack Freeman Gets Award

Fifteen graduating seniors, varsity and freshman coaches and the entire varsity and freshman football squads were honored by the Alumni Association at its annual football banquet last November 26.

Reserve senior quarterback Jack Freeman, who drew outstanding praise from Head Coach Blanton L. Collier earlier in the program, was presented the annual Samuel L. Huey, Jr., scholarship award for the best over-all scholastic record during his first three years in the University.

Freeman, called "one of the truly great boys I have ever known . . . and possibly the most valuable member of the team" by Coach Collier, received the award for compiling a 3.1 standing over a four-year period as a pre-medical student.

Dr. Frank G. Dickey, UK president, paid tribute to the "finest coaching staff in America . . . and one of the best squads of players, managers and other personnel in the country" in delivering the principal address.

"There can be no doubt," Dr. Dickey said, "that this team displayed as much courage and determination as any team we have ever had. Yes, some mistakes were made, but those mistakes were turned into lessons which made winners out of losers later on."

"They were game; they were in there trying every minute of the time — and that applies to those who may not have played a single minute in a regular game as well as to those 58-minute players," the president noted.

Dr. Dickey had special praise for Coach Collier—"a man who believes in a type of coaching to which I heartily subscribe." The president recalled that some persons were critical of the UK coach during the early part of the season, but rather than follow the pattern of coaching which these second-guessers and disloyal "beefers" were advocating, "Coach Collier chose to follow his strong beliefs that these men are reasoning and intelligent persons and deserve to be treated as human beings instead of like so many animals.

"This inherent belief in the importance of the individual paid dividends not only on the football field, but I predict that these men on the football squad will be better citizens as a result of this approach," the speaker explained.

Dr. Dickey described the 6-4 season as a "remarkable" one, and added that this coaching staff and football squad have brought real honor and glory to the University of Kentucky.

Coach Collier announced the names of 25 varsity letter-winners and 45 freshman numeral winners.

Fourteen seniors and Manager Bobby Holt were presented watches by the Alumni Association.

Seniors so honored were Co-Captains Dave Kuhn and Roger Pack, Al Zampino, J. T. Frankenberger, Jack Butler, Duke Curnutte, Bob Bennett, Don Netoskie, Billy Mitchell, Bob Dougherty, Delmar Hughes, Jack Freeman, Roger Harrington and Bill Farley. The latter did not play sufficient time to receive a letter.

James Ryan, '51, is a development engineer with Struthers-Wells Corp., at Warren, Pa., and recently passed his examination as a professional engineer. He was married in 1953 and has two daughters.

Bill Corum, '42, of Madisonville, past president of the Hopkins County UK Alumni Club, has been elected president of the Southern Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers. The association represents 16 southern states.

Mrs. Joyce Hicks Thompson, '39, has been named news editor of the Decatur, Ill., afternoon Review.

State Buys 1,122 Acres For UK Use

Coldstream Farm, long a historic Blue Grass showplace, and a 372-acre tract adjacent to the farm has been acquired by the State as a supplement to the University of Kentucky's Experiment Station Farm. Plans for purchasing the additional farm area were announced Dec. 21 by Gov. A. B. Chandler.

The 750 acres at Coldstream are being purchased from Mr. and Mrs. Henry Knight for $1,650 an acre. The adjacent tract, owned by Hugh A. Grant, is being purchased at the same price. Cost of the 1,122 acres will be paid out of state funds.

Dr. Frank J. Welch, dean of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, said Coldstream can be converted immediately for research work in both plant and animal fields with little capital outlay.

The present Experiment Station Farm will continue to be used for experimental work, but will be used gradually for expansion of the now-crowded campus proper, UK officials reported. Allotment of about 39 acres of the UK farm for the University Medical Center was the latest in a series of gradual encroachments on the farm.

Gov. Chandler stated that the 202-acre farm on the Nicholasville Road, which the University bought about a year ago to supplement the present experiment farm, will be sold.

ALUM, OUTSTANDING TEACHER IN FAYETTE

Mrs. Edna Shivell Baucom, '28, mathematics teacher at Lafayette High School in Lexington, has been selected the outstanding teacher in the Fayette county school system.

Mrs. Baucom, a native of Marion county, was honored last October at a meeting of the Central Kentucky Education Association in Richmond. She is in the 39th year of teaching, and has spent 34 years in the schools of Fayette county. She is a graduate of Caldwell College, Danville, and holds an A.B. degree from UK. She is a member of the Fayette County Teachers' Association, the NEA, KEA and FCEA.

Alumnae With Army Special Services Here And Abroad

Miss Nita Powers, a UK radio arts major, in the class of 1951, and a member of Delta Zeta sorority, returned in September from a two-year assignment with Army Special Services in Europe. Before going overseas, where she directed The Hitching Post Service Club, Bad Kreuznach, Germany, Miss Powers was assistant club director, Service Club No. 2, Fort Knox, Kentucky.

Miss Powers has recently joined the recruitment staff of Special Services Division in Washington. Her first assignment as a recruiter brought her to the University of Kentucky campus where she was able to answer many questions concerning the Army Recreation Program.

According to Miss Powers, the Army Recreation Program is an invaluable aid in the development of well-adjusted and physically fit men and women in the service. In her opinion the success of this program depends to a great extent on the civilians who are employed to assist Special Services Officers in planning and directing a wide range of recreation activities in the service clubs, libraries, arts and crafts shops, entertainment and sports programs at Army Installations.

For more information concerning Army Special Services, Miss Powers advised single alumnae, 23 years of age, with leadership ability . . . write the Adjutant General, Department of the Army, Washington 25, D.C., Attention: AGMZ-R, or consult the University Placement Office.

Other UK alumnae with the program include Mary Jane Chatfield, '51, who went overseas in 1955 for orientation as a recreational leader in Nurnberg, before assignment in the Service Club, Idar-Oberstein, Germany. Last September she was promoted to program director and transferred to the La Rochelle, France Service Club.

Hilda Bolling, M.A. '54, also is connected with the same service. She went to Aschaffenburg, Darmstadt, Germany a year ago as club director of the Jaeger House Service Club there.
