Pass/fail courses possible hindrance

STUDENTS considering taking one or more undergraduate classes on the pass-fail option may wish to reconsider.

Credit hours earned on pass-fail will apply toward graduation, but there is no reflection in a student's grade point average.

A recent survey published in the Educational Record showed that over 10 per cent of pass-fail graded courses can be a disadvantage to a student trying to be admitted into graduate school.

OUT OF 140 graduate schools surveyed, 101 answered that pass-fail courses present major problems when evaluating a student's work for admission.

Dr. Wimberley C. Royster, UK graduate school dean, said a great deal depended on the amount of undergraduate classes taken on the pass-fail option.

By SUSAN OGDEN
Kernel Staff Writer

If a transfer student applies who has had several pass-fail courses, it is customary to request letters of recommendation.

Royster added although the graduate school does not turn down such applicants, "it does cause problems" when trying to compute to see if the 2.5 grade point minimum is met.

THE SURVEY showed students may have difficulty in acquiring financial aid or seeking employment without the traditional grades on their records. At some institutions, probationary status is assigned to a new student if he has taken a heavy load of pass-fail classes.

In order to supplement pass-fail records, comprehensive letters, annotated grade reports and other devices are needed. Scores from standardized tests are more heavily relied on than those of a student with traditional grades, according to the survey.

Both the survey and Royster believe that pass-fail is clearly disadvantageous to students wishing to enter graduate school and will present problems of varying degree to other students.

Survey results

Of the 200 graduate schools polled 140 replied on their feelings on pass-fail grading.

News In Brief

by THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

- Miners vote
- Nixon subpoenaed
- Defense escalation
- Gromyko talks begin
- Women converge
- Trucking negotiations
- National Guard alert
- Today's weather...

● LONDON — Eighty-one per cent of Britain's coal miners voted for a crippling nation-wide strike, and their leader said Monday about the only thing that will head it off is "more cash on the table."

"If the government doesn't take the result of the ballot seriously then all I can say is that the government itself cannot be taken seriously," declared union president Joe Gormley.

● LOS ANGELES — President Nixon was officially subpoenaed on Monday to testify in the Ellsberg burglary case.

The subpoena, requested by former presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman, ordered the President to appear in a Los Angeles courtroom Feb. 25 and again April 15.

● WASHINGTON — President Nixon asked Congress Monday for authority to spend more money on defense in fiscal 1975 than in any single year of World War II.

The $85.8-billion spending request for the coming fiscal year tops 1945, when the $79.9 billion spent was the largest ever for America's non-nuclear armed forces.

● WASHINGTON — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko began a round of high level talks here Monday on the prospects for an Israeli-Syrian troop disengagement and East German pressure on access to West Berlin.

Gromyko was in an unusually expansive mood as he emerged from a two-hour session with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and headed for the White House to call on President Nixon.

● FRANKFORT — An estimated 200 Jefferson County women converged on Kentucky's capitol Monday to push an anti-busing resolution.

Mrs. Charles Spond, president of Save Our Community Schools Inc., led the group as it spread out from the rotunda and sought members of the House Elections Committee.

● WASHINGTON — Negotiations intensified Monday to end the spreading independent truckers' shutdown, with the drivers still at odds over the government's objection to their key demand—a rollback of diesel fuel prices.

● FRANKFORT — Gov. Wendell Ford announced Monday he had placed the Kentucky National Guard on alert to a move to prevent further violence connected with the independent truckers' boycott.

Ford's action came after shots were fired into five trucks in Kentucky as the nationwide boycott began causing some difficulties with supplies of gasoline and food in the Bluegrass State.

Also, three Pike County schools were closed for the day because of a gasoline shortage. Pike County Judge Wayne Rutherford declared an emergency existed there.

...more cold

The cold weather may still be with us as the high today should be in the mid 30s and the low tonight in the mid 20s. The outlook for Wednesday is a little warmer with a slight chance of rain.

Ford, the yes man

Vice-President Gerald Ford, in his fervor to protect President Nixon, has embarked on a campaign to show the White House is fully cooperating with Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

Ford intimates that Nixon has established an unofficial "Operation Candor" with Jaworski, and is only too eager to come across with tapes and documents for which Jaworski has asked.

Jaworski, however, tells of problems obtaining information, and speaks of one occasion in December when he had to threaten the White House with a subpoena before the information was relayed.

Ford maintains the White House has produced more tapes and documents than Jaworski has requested. That may be true, but Ford overlooks the obvious, in return for political gain. What good is it to Jaworski and the Watergate investigation if the White House produces 50 tapes, if none have any bearing on the investigation, and were not requested by Jaworski?

Nixon and his Administration have enough problems dealing with the series of misdealings currently under Jaworski's scrutiny. It should avoid new problems which may arise through Ford's shallow, "yes man" type remarks.

Please, give to the election of your choice

WASHINGTON—From now until April 15, we shall undergo a rising crescendo of TV ads begging us to give a painless dollar to the cost of political campaigns by checking a box on the income-tax forms. Then in the fall, we'll be subjected to another brow-beating media barrage ordering us to go and register to vote.

Those who don't give and don't vote will be accused of the crime of "apathy". Worthless citizens that they are, they'll be informed that they have no right to complain and that the rotten government they're going to get is the one they deserve.

SUCH STATEMENTS, however, are subject to Brobynnsky's First Law. It was the late, great Albanian political scientist, Alexander Brobynnsky, who declared that all universally held political slogans are ipso facto false. So, although you won't hear it on TV this year, you can serve yourself and your country by abstention.

In fact, this disreputable position has found organized expression since 1971 in a small group called The League of Non-Voters. There being a high correlation between non-voters and non-joiners, the League is short on members, but what it wants in numbers it compensates for in felicitous bumper stickers, among which are VOIN THE BOTER JOYCOTT. Vote for Sterile Hassen—He Can't Get You in Trouble; and the Lesser of Two Evils—Is Evil. (More information on the League can be had by writing to Box 1406, Santa Ana, Calif. 92702.)

But if abstention is too unacceptable a thought to get any of that free public-service air time, at least 44 per cent of the eligible voters cast no ballot in 1972. Or to put it in other terms, it means that "the overwhelming mandate" the Nixon people like to refer to consisted of about one-third of the electorate.

SY LEON, who doubles as the president of right-wing Ramparts College and chairman of the League of Non-Voters, remarks that the "ninety-three million who didn't vote for Nixon are the real silent majority. They're so silent because they've got ear-phones on and they're listening."

Perhaps they are. Leon is one of the few people around who takes non-voters seriously. Almost everybody else is too busy calling them names or yelling at them to get off their duffs to ponder why so many don't care to make that small effort.

Laziness hardly suffices as an explanation. After all, your boss has to pay you if you take time off from work to vote. In most states today it's easier to register than to find a place to buy an airmail stamp. Nevertheless, as suffrage has been broadened and made absurdly accessible, larger numbers of people ignore the whole process.

IT WOULD BE A mistake to assume that all people who don't vote do so for the same reasons. But whatever their reasons, they have obviously concluded that, on balance, the small expenditure in energy it takes isn't worth it, perhaps because they agree with Leon, who says, "Voting is like going through one of two doors. Whichever one you take, you wind up in the same room."

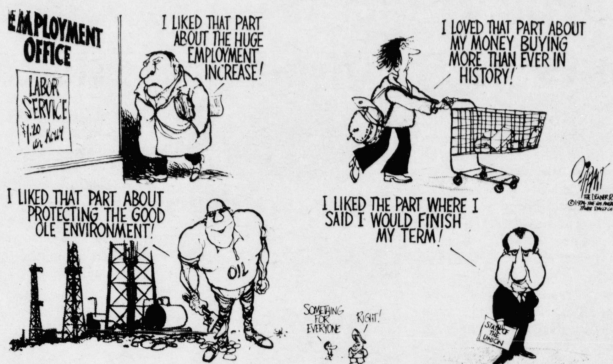

The liberals came to that conclusion with Lyndon Johnson in the '60's; the conservatives have learned the same from Richard Nixon in the '70's. The usual response to this observation is that you've got to participate to change it. Such talk has a convincing ring until one has participated, elected his man and then found out he might just as well have supported the loser for all the difference it made. This is not to say that more than a very few non-voters are disillusioned, dropped-out former participants. Most people catch on early that what is wanted of them is the appearance of participation, not the fact. Have you ever thought about the connotation of words most commonly used by the media and the politicians to describe those who do more than check off their dollar and vote? Words like militants, extremists or activists?

The primary function of many American elections isn't selection but legitimization. It's an expensive validation process akin to the anointing of kings. One way to make it less of an inherited ritual would be to adopt Sy Leon's proposal that we have an extra box on the Presidential ballot, one that reads "None of the above".

MANY MORE PEOPLE would go to the polls on Election Day if they knew they didn't have to vote for the candidates.

Letters to the Kernel
Scriptures will absolve Nixon

What is the reason for the push of President Nixon's impeachment? Are the people who are demanding impeachment searching for truth or are they searching for a sense of righteousness to say, "I knew I was right!"

In the article from Thursday Jan. 31, 1974 (Resolved: That Richard Nixon should be impeached), it said, "Criminal behavior and a loss of public trust were cited as justification for impeachment". If "criminal behavior" did exist it could be proven, but has it been proven? "Loss of public trust" seems to be shouted out only by those unsupporting, pro-impeachment Nixon "fans".

I have heard Watergate too long. Why can't people who say they want the truth search for it with real concern, a concern for the people of America.

I repeat, I am tired of hearing Watergate. Do you care about me or is it that you want to prove you're right.

Bottle bill

As you know, the "Bottle Bill", or bill prohibiting the sale of beverages in non-returnable glass containers was defeated by the State senate on January 24, 1974, pending a two year statewide study of Kentucky's "litter problem", (which is more than a mere problem as anyone familiar with places like Indian falls in Jessamine County will testify).

Senator John Berry Jr. (D-New Castle) stated, "There was no organized support for the bill as the environmental groups did nothing to promote it." This statement wasn't exactly true, as there was some support, but, quite obviously, not nearly enough! We have a second chance!

If you own a camera, be it an Instamatic or a Hasselblad, shoot litter, with emphasis on bottles, of course. If you take one picture, just one, it will help! Write on the back of the print, (or slide mount, as the case may be,) the date the picture was taken and the exact location, and send it to your state senator or representative.

UK's campus alone has the potential to literally flood the Senate and the House with photographic evidence of the adverse effects of disposable

Corps rejection of project puts eggs in single basket

By STEVE MAYES

The Army Corps of Engineers proposal to dam the Red River is still up in the air pending the completion of a final environmental impact statement. However, to depend on the Corps to reject one of their projects is putting too many eggs in one basket.

The Corps is trapped into proposing and approving such booby boondoggles in order to justify its own existence. The benefit-cost ratio is the magic wand the Corps flourishes. Simply put, the benefits have to outweigh the costs of a project before it can be authorized.

COL. EDWIN Decker, retired St. Louis District Engineer for the Corps describes the benefit-cost ratio in all its glory. "It's nothing but a ritual. They come down the aisle swinging their incense and chanting 'Benefit-cost'. You can adjust the B-C ratio to justify any project. I did it a few times myself."

Ostensibly, the benefits of the dam will be flood control and recreation. Two points need to be made here. One, that floods are a natural phenomenon and are not the result of Poseidon's temper tantrums; and two, that periodic flooding enriches valley bottoms through the deposit of water-borne sediments and removes silt from the river bed.

All too often the Corps views its projects as a way of "taming" or "controlling" nature. But who are they "controlling" it for?

GOV. WENDELL FORD

Inevitably it is the special interest groups such as industrial developers, towboat operators and recreational developers (Red River Gorge estates anyone?)

This need not happen. Two alternatives have been noted by opponents of the dam. Pipe water from the Cave Run reservoir near Morehead for a fraction of the cost or build Booneville Dam on the South Fork of the Kentucky River. The Booneville Dam would supply water for up to 100 years in the event of a drought while the Red River dam would only supply water for 30 years.

ANOTHER POINT to consider is that dams treat the symptoms of the problem of flooding but not the problem itself. Sometimes floods are caused or increase in intensity because of the activities of man. Clearcutting of forests, development along flood plains and the destruction of the surrounding watershed are just a few of the ways that man alters the ecological balance.

Dams also represent only a temporary solution to the symptom since their usefulness extends only 125 years.

Truly, the Gorge deserves a better fate than inundation for 30 years of questionable water supply (the last drought was in the 1930's).

Three people hold the power to halt the project now. Write Gov. Wendell Ford and Senators Marlow Cook and Walter Huddleston and let them know that you don't want another mud puddle for water skiers.

And if this dam isn't stopped by those three people I promise to personally help Ray Dickinson push the Corps' bulldozers and earthmovers off the nearest cliff. If this dam isn't stopped by those three people I promise to personally help Ray Dickinson push the Corps' bulldozers and earthmovers off the nearest cliff.

Tissue rights

I was on the second floor WOMEN's room in the Student Center, today, to blow my nose, and so noticed that all of the commode stalls, except for the handicapped one, were out of toilet tissue. I realize that there are many fewer handicapped people than there are non-handicapped ones and so less tissue is used, but I also know that the non's have an equal right to toilet tissue on hand when we need it.

Today's energy crisis just a prelude of things to come

There may be an energy crisis today, but not in the same vein that we are led to believe, according to Dr. Teruo Fujii, acting chairman of the telecommunications department.

Fujii has had much experience in energy matters and was previously a consultant for one of the nation's leading oil companies.

FUJII CLAIMS the ecology movement has been one of the major contributors to the so-called 'crisis'. He said ecologists applied pressure to the oil companies which resulted in a curtailment of much drilling and exploration for petroleum.

This gave the oil companies and the government a perfect opportunity to create the crisis he noted, adding that the only thing needed was a trigger.

"That trigger was the boycott of the Arab States against US oil importing", he explained.

But Fujii warns, just because there is not a true crisis now doesn't mean we should not worry. At the rate we are expending energy, there will be one in our lifetime.

THE MAJOR reason for that is the wasteful habits of the American people, he said.

"These wasteful things include cars with large engines, air conditioning in homes and cars in areas they are not needed, and some of the other modern labor-saving devices," he said.

If such wasteful expenditure of energy continues, Fujii contends that there will soon be a real petroleum shortage, as well as one of coal.

THE COAL shortage will hurt other facets of our life too. Much of the coal that we burn could be used in the manufacture of medicine and other products, he said.

There are many solutions to the petroleum shortage, said Fujii, but rationing is not one of these. We would be better to attack the problem at its source, he added.

Legislation for banning cars with large engines is one thing Fujii said he would like to see. This would help solve two problems he explained—it would stop the wasting of gasoline which large cars cause and help cut down on air pollution.

MORE FUNDS would also have to be spent on developing alternate forms of energy, such as atomic energy and solar power, said Fujii.

Computing center aids University

By VICKI BINGHAM
Kernel Staff Writer

The University of Kentucky Computing Center, located in McVey Hall, is a service facility used to provide for the computing needs of the University community.

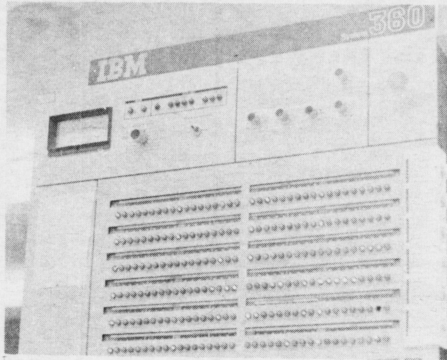

The center operates 364 days a year and employs 57 people to run the $3 million worth of equipment. The type of computer being used is IBM System-360 Model 65.

"THE CENTER'S budget is approximately $750,000 this year," said M.B. Solomon, director of the center.

Each year the center is funded according to the amount of money allocated to vice-presidents and administrative officers for distribution to the departments and the priorities of programs presented to the president and the vice-presidents.

The operation of the computing center is divided into three major groups. The first group, data processing, is responsible for the operations connected with the administrative functions of the University. Second, research and development, handles projects in research and educational areas, and third, systems programming and operations, executes the maintenance and technical functions of the center.

MOST OF the work done by the center pertains to instructional purposes for students, said Solomon. Forty-nine per cent of the center's operation is instructional, 15 per cent is used for administrative work, 25 per cent is used for research, and the remaining percentage is used for maintenance and other functions.

One aspect of special interest to students is the TESTH test grading program developed to score and evaluate tests. The computer can score up to 160 questions per test form and can score four different tests at once.

Test questions may be grouped to obtain individual group results in addition to the total test analysis. Grouping can be used to determine a student's knowledge of certain subject areas or to test his ability to answer certain types of questions.

THE COMPUTER can also indicate how much a student is guessing by penalty grading.

This program enables a professor to evaluate and improve his testing methods.

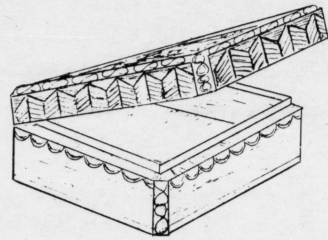

"COMPUTERS CAN help make each individual unique" said Solomon. "The computer can remember what a student has done on the basis of past information and can give individual attention to the needs of a student."

'Chariots of Gods' opens fourth book review series

The UK Human Relations Center will open its fourth series of book reviews with Erich Von Daniken's Chariots of the Gods.

Dr. John Scarborough, associate professor of history, will conduct the oral review at 3 p.m. today in the Rare Book Room of the King Library, the setting for all reviews in the series.

DANIKEN'S BOOK deals with the theory of ancient gods who once came to earth, promising to return.

As he states in his book, "We the paragons of creation? — took 400,000 years to reach our present state and our present stature.

"Who can produce concrete proof to show why another planet should not have provided more favorable conditions for the development of other similar intelligences?"

Dr. Earleen Craver will continue the series, reviewing Upstairs at the White House, My Life with the First Ladies by J.B. West on Feb. 19.

Johnny, We Hardly Knew Ye will be the third book in the series. Authored by O'Donnell, Powers and McCarthy, it will be reviewed by Father William Hubbell on March 5.

April 2, Dr. David Burg will review Alistair Cooke's America.

The series will end on April 23 with They Wouldn't Let us Die by Stephen A. Rowan. Dr. Sheldon Simon will lead this final review. All reviews will be open to the public.

Conner stars in Wednesday tuba recital

Rex Conner, associate professor at UK, will perform in a tuba recital at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday in Memorial Hall.

Inscribed music, written especially for Conner, will fill the program. Robert Spillman's Four Greek Preludes, Gordon Kinney's Ricercar for Tuba and Little Suite for Tuba along with William Presser's Minute Sketches will be played.

THE RECITAL is being sponsored by the School of Music and is open to the public.

Lyons nets 21
Cats slip by LSU 73-70

By BILL STRAUB
Kernel Sports Editor
The Grevey-less UK Wildcat basketball team overcame a whopping 29 turnovers and a putrid free throw shooting night to rip the LSU Tigers 73-70.

Kentucky built up a 41-34 halftime advantage mostly behind the fine shooting of guards Ronnie Lyons and Mike Flynn. Lyons, the 5-10 captain from Maysville was almost unstoppable from the perimeter in the opening period hitting for 12 points, most coming from more than 25 feet out. He scored six of UK's last 10 in the half. Flynn, a junior guard from Jeffersonville, Ind., led the Cats with 13 points while leading the defensive charge.

BUT THE second half was another story. After taking their biggest lead of the game, 53-40 on a tip by Jimmy Dan Conner at 14:53, the Cats went sour and were outscored 30-20 the rest of the way. LSU gradually chipped away at UK's bulge with forward Glenn Hansen leading the way with 12 points down the stretch.

At 8:47, Lyons stole the ball away from Hansen, dribbled down the court and scored an uncontested lay-up. It made the score 65-52 and was the Cats' last field goal. At 7:19 the Cats started shooting the bonus, but managed to hit only eight of 16 the rest of the way.

The closest LSU was to come was with just seven seconds left when Hansen, a thorn in Kentucky's side all season, hit a short jumper making it 71-70. Lyons took the ball in and dribbled around the pack until fouled with no time left. He sank both free throws to make the final score.

LYONS TOOK Kentucky's scoring honors with 21 points followed closely by Flynn with 20. Hansen, the conference's leading scorer took game honors with 26 while LSU's 6-9 center Collis Temple banged in 20 going 10 for 12 from the floor. Temple also grabbed nine rebounds, but fouled out with 2:13 left, hindering the Bayou Bengals' final surge. Bob Guyette grabbed 14 carroms for the Cats.

The difference between this game and Kentucky's 95-84 loss earlier in the season at Baton Rouge lies in the Cats' ability to break the Tigers' press. It wasn't until LSU switched from a 2-2-1 trap zone press to a "matchup" press that coach Joe Hall's crew started falling apart.

Kentucky is now 10-8 overall and 6-4 in conference. LSU is also 10-8 overall but 4-6 in conference. Kentucky will meet the Georgia Bulldogs in Athens Saturday.

Madness and demonism, ever present in Bergman's films, but usually held in restraint, are made explicit themes. It is also a study of death of the most horrifying sort—the spirit disintegrates while the body continues.

The Naked Night

A misunderstood and neglected film at the time of its release, with the passage of time, its true stature and importance in the evolution of Bergman's philosophy is apparent. Some critics consider it to be Bergman's finest film.

Law caucus sponsors workshop concerning women and the law

The Women's Law Caucus will sponsor a workshop on "Women and the Law" Feb. 9 at 9:30 a.m. (registration) in the court room of the Law Building.

The student-based group will be aided in the workshop by The Lexington Women's Center Legal Rights Committee.

"WE WANT to include women outside the University community to come in and find out about law as it pertains to women," said Sonja Baesemann, one of the planners of the workshop. "It's kind of like a know your rights thing."

The program will begin at 10 a.m. with a panel discussion between Mary Ann Delaney, assistant attorney general, Marie Abrams, Kentucky commission on women, Julia Tackett, Lexington attorney, Nancy Ray, Lexington attorney and equal opportunity officer and Laura Murrell, assistant attorney general in consumer protection division.

A workshop will follow the panel discussion. Topics for the workshop are legislative reform, family law, job discrimination, consumer affairs and property and finance laws.

"WE'RE TRYING to go beyond the students and inform women in the community of their rights," Baesemann explained.

There will be a $2 donation asked from those attending the workshop and free child care will be offered. Interested persons should contact Nina Rotter, 278-8920.

Adelstein elected to fill Board of Trustees position

Dr. Michael Adelstein, English professor, has been elected faculty member on the Board of Trustees, replacing Dr. Paul Sears. Adelstein will serve a three-year term, beginning July 1, 1974.

He was elected on the third ballot with a total of 362 votes. A total of 1,264 ballots were sent on each of the three ballots, said Kathryn Shelburne, secretary of the University Senate, who supervised the election.

SHELBURNE EXPLAINED that it took the maximum three ballots before Adelstein received the necessary majority vote. Adelstein and Dr. Robert Rudd, agriculture economics professors, were the only two nominees remaining on the third ballot.

Adelstein, who is currently on sabbatical leave, served as chairman of the University Senate from Jan. 1, 1973 to Dec. 31, 1973.
